Record snowfall strands thousands

SNOW SHOVELERS like Lee Bryant of Arlington Heights found it difficult to keep up with the fast-falling snow, which was expected to be foot-deep by morning. But Wednesday's effort put him about 6 inches ahead.

by LYNN ASINOF
The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

- O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 53. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

EVERY AVAILABLE SNOWPLOW in the Northwest suburbs was called out Wednesday to battle heavy snows that fell in record amounts and caused massive traffic jams along all major roads, in the area. Mike Weiner, Wheeling public works employee, attaches the blade to a truck in the midst of the storm, readying it for duty.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 53 and Ill. Rte. 58 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 458 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC8 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seats.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollett, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 85 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would send in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

Big snow of '67? Ah, it's easily remembered

by JOHN MAES

The memories came easily Wednesday afternoon for those who weathered it Jan. 27, 1967, the day of the big one when Chicago was smothered with 25 inches of snow.

Remember? — hours of back-breaking snow shoveling, spending the night at work or the nearest refuge because you couldn't tell your car from a snowdrift. Or how about the weather forecasters who ended up eating crow after predicting a moderate four-inch snowfall?

There were those 65 stranded residents who converged on an Arlington Heights service station because they couldn't make it home. For dinner, they feasted on snacks and soda from vending ma-into overnight motels, snow-plow operators became folk heroes putting in periods of 20 and 30 hours straight.

And, if you were young enough, it was the sheer delight of not having school for as long as three days.

Normal modes of transportation became useless in 1967 as mile-long streams of abandoned, stranded cars, trucks and buses lined impassable area roadways. Persons carting children and supplies on sleds down normally busy streets were not uncommon sights.

One Itasca doctor made a housecall on a snowmobile to administer to a sick child.

HARDWARE STORES sold snow shovels, snow throwers and auto tire chains by the truckload while bread, milk and staple food items quickly disappeared from grocery store shelves.

One Prospect Heights camera dealer even reported a sharp increase in sales of his wares. "Everyone wanted to take pictures," he said.

And then there was Al Volz of Arlington Heights, then the oldest village resident at 86, who said at the time the big snow was nothing compared to one that fell in 1883. He was reported to have said "bunk" to statements the '67 snowfall was the biggest the area had ever seen.

Near Harper College the snow was blowing across the open fields, piling in drifts on the shoulders. Snowplows were in the traffic but bottled up by the very cars they were trying to free from the snow.

Motorists learned to travel about a mile every half hour. At times they rolled down their windows and chatted with their neighbors of the moment.

What did they talk about? The weather, of course.

What did they think about? Home.

1,000 students stuck in 3 Skokie schools

Some 1,000 students were reported snowbound Wednesday night at three Skokie high schools. School buses reportedly made one trip home after school but were unable to get back to Niles North, East and West high schools for a second run. "The way the weather is, their chances of getting home are slim," a Skokie policeman said. "I don't know if they're entertaining them, but at least the students have a warm, dry place to sleep." Skokie police also reported persons snowbound at the Old Orchard Shopping Center, Allstate Insurance Co. and Brunswick Corp.

Caucus power at an end?

The Arlington Heights Caucus, an unofficial group that comes together every two years to nominate and run candidates for village office, is in serious trouble. David Griffin, Caucus candidate for village president, and three of the four candidates for village trustee were defeated Tuesday. "Personally, I think we've seen the end of the Caucus," said Joan Hammerstone, chairman of the candidate recommendation committee. "The voters in their own way have said they want an end to it." Independent James T. Ryan beat Griffin by 1,100 votes in the village president race.

Plane crash under study

National Transportation Safety Board officials are investigating a light-plane crash that killed a Des Plaines man late Tuesday in Ohio. Officials said William C. Froude, 41, of 526 Kinkaid Ct., was pronounced dead in the cockpit of the Piper Cherokee single-engine plane after it reportedly struck power lines as it approached Freedom Field in Medina County near Cleveland. The plane carried no passengers. Sheriff's Police said the accident occurred about 10:30 p.m. An FAA spokesman said the plane was believed to have been based at Schaumburg Airport.

Snow closes some schools

Oakton Community College, Maine Township High School Dist. 207 and Des Plaines Dist. 62 will be closed today because of the snow. Most other Northwest suburban schools already are closed for — believe it or not — spring vacation.

Viet ambassador: it's fatal to be ally of U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. failure to "lift a finger" to stop the Communist onslaught in Indochina is evidence that "it is safer to be an ally of the Communists and . . . fatal to be an ally of the United States," the ambassador from South Vietnam said Wednesday.

Ambassador Tran Kim Phuong said the United States is losing its credibility around the world because it has failed to provide additional military aid to his country.

"I would think that the people around the world would draw only one possible conclusion . . . that is, probably, it is safer to be an ally of the Communists and it looks like it is fatal to be an ally of the United States," Phuong said in a taped interview on the CBS Morning News.

"I say that very coolly. Not . . . with any passion . . . but I think that it is a conclusion that people in the world would draw," he said.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee meanwhile dispatched a two-person team of staff investigators to Saigon to provide first-hand reports on the chaotic situation in the beleaguered country.

Richard M. Moose and Charles F. Meisner left Wednesday for an investigation scheduled to last at least two weeks and possibly more.

Phuong's comments on television were the most bitter of any top level South Vietnamese official since the current Communist offensive began.

"We have evidence that 19 divisions of North Vietnamese troops are now fighting in South Vietnam," he said. " . . . It is sickening for us to see that nobody lifts a finger, that nobody, and especially the guarantor of the Paris agreement . . . not one of them makes one single move to stop this onslaught."

He also charged that the United States violated the 1973 Paris Peace Agreement by failing to replace lost or destroyed South Vietnamese weapons on a one-to-one basis.

"The provision and replacement of weapons, one-for-one, has not been respected," he said, and added, "It's quite natural that there is a loss of heart in our troops."

Despite the rapidly deteriorating situation in South Vietnam, Phuong said "most certainly the war is not over."

But he attributed the Communist drive, which has overrun 16 of 44 provincial capitals so far, to a new North Vietnamese boldness inspired by knowledge that the U.S. Congress opposed funds for additional supplies.

In Saigon, rumors of plots and fears of an impending Communist attack have plunged the South Vietnamese capital into a mood of grim uncertainty.

On the surface, things appear normal. Vietnamese girls, their graceful Ao Dais and black hair flowing in the breeze, promenade along the Saigon River past the Majestic Hotel, smiling and chatting gaily.

But a few hundred yards away, hundreds of students from northern areas overrun by Communists, wait anxiously for every refugee boat, looking for missing friends and relatives.

In President Nguyen Van Thieu's palace, grim-faced aides and generals come and go in a crisis atmosphere.

Outside, in secret gatherings, powerful political figures and others who want to see action or change, plot against Thieu.

In a Chinese waterfront restaurant others talk about the plots but mostly how to get out if the Communists come.

Impressive Communist victories, the fall of major cities and whole provinces, without a fight or explanation, feed the rumors, heighten the fears, increase the uncertainty and move the city closer to panic that could cause collapse and anarchy.

Rabin: Israel, Egypt need face-to-face negotiations

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Wednesday the collapse of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's Middle East peace mission showed the need for face-to-face Egyptian-Israeli negotiations for a new Sinai agreement. Rabin also said he had little doubt Congress would approve new U.S. aid to Israel.

"I believe that out of experience gained during Dr. Kissinger's mission, the absence of a direct contact between Egypt and Israel is sorely felt," Rabin said in a radio interview. "Contentions have been raised about misunderstandings, but the reason for misunderstandings lies mainly in the absence of direct Egyptian-Israeli contact."

Guerrillas strike in Buenos Aires

Four carloads of guerrillas firing shotguns and lobbing grenades in Buenos Aires killed an army colonel and a policeman Wednesday and wounded the chief of security for powerful presidential secretary Jose Lopez Rega. Police sources said a second policeman and a chauffeur also were wounded. Retired federal police chief Gabriel Morales, the apparent target of the attack, controls the bodyguards for Lopez Rega, Social Welfare Minister and private secretary and key adviser to President Maria Estela "Isabel" Peron.

Airline asks $89 coast-to-coast flights

World Airways, which has been thrust into the world spotlight by its daring rescue of Vietnam refugees and orphans, asked the Civil Aeronautics Board Wednesday to let it begin daily coast-to-coast flights costing passengers only $89 plus tax.

Approval of the request would slash the one-way cost of transcontinental air travel more than one third below present coach fares. The total cost of a ticket would be $96.46 counting tax and the airport security surcharge.

The big airline — the world's largest supplemental carrier and the third largest U.S. carrier operating internationally — tied its bargain basement fare proposal to a request for permission to become a regularly scheduled U.S. airline.

Amtrak orders 435 new passenger cars

Amtrak Wednesday ordered 435 new passenger cars at a total cost of $233 million, including the first new railroad sleeping cars in two decades. About 235 of the new cars will be double-deckers for use on long-distance routes, to be built by Pullman Standard at its Hammond, Ind., plant, for $167 million. The remaining 200 cars will be single-level ones for use on eastern routes.

WITH THE special fund that guarantees 44,000 laid-off Chrysler Corp. workers up to 95 per cent of their take-home pay soon to be exhausted, more than 50 idled Chrysler truck drivers and their families held a mock funeral in front of a Chrysler Traffic Department office, in Detroit. They were mourning the loss of their jobs last November during the company's sharp cutbacks. For some, the loss of the payments could mean the loss of their homes.

Communists battle 38 miles from Saigon

7 positions near phnom Penh fall

THE FIRST road convoys of refugees fleeing the coastal collapse of S. Vietnam were at Saigon's outskirts Wednesday. Less than 5,000 government troops were reported standing before the Communist onslaught that has overrun 17 provinces — two thirds of South Vietnam.

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist-led rebel troops Wednesday captured seven positions east, west and south of besieged Phnom Penh. The U.S. Embassy announced it was evacuating about 15 per cent of its staff from the Cambodian capital.

Furious fighting could be clearly heard in the capital during the night. Rebel rockets, artillery and mortar shells hit both the capital and Pochentong airport, where the American airlift continued on a curtailed basis.

One person was killed and 15 others wounded in the shelling attacks. One American plane was slightly damaged by shrapnel.

At one point, the rebels began firing artillery from east of the capital for the first time, with shells landing on a thin peninsula separating the Mekong and Tonle Sap rivers, only about 400 yards from the heart of Phnom Penh.

There was no word on the fate of more than 60,000 refugees and soldiers in the Mekong river town of Neak Luong, 31 miles southeast of here, which fell to the insurgents Tuesday night.

The fall of the town gave the insurgents total control of the Mekong River and, sources said, might free as many as 6,000 troops for the siege of Phnom Penh.

The cutback in the staff of the U. S.

Embassy — obviously a result of government setbacks on Phnom Penh's ever-shrinking defense perimeter — was announced by Robert V. Keeley, deputy chief of mission.

In Saigon, panic and confusion spread ahead of the Communist's blitzkrieg offensive, and heavy fighting was reported only 38 miles east of Saigon, where the communists cut key Highway 1. Another threat to Saigon developed on an arc west and north of the city.

With Saigon a capital full of rumors and jangled nerves, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen announced the White House has ruled out any American bombing to aid South Vietnam's collapsing military forces.

"The law forbids it. The President's inclinations are against it. And he has no plans to do it."

Salmon, meanwhile, writhed in a crisis of leadership. The South Vietnamese Senate passed a resolution asking that President Nguyen Van Thieu be replaced and blamed the staggering Communist victories on failure of the United States to live up to its commitments in Indochina.

The Viet Cong Provisional Revolutionary Government in a statement issued in Paris implied that its military offensive would press ahead with an attack on Saigon unless Thieu was overthrown. It said peace could be negotiated only if he were replaced.

Less than 5,000 government troops were reported standing before the Communist onslaught that has overrun 17 provinces — two-thirds of South Vietnam. Half of them were battling near Xuan Loc, where the Communists cut Highway 1 and blocked the government retreat down the coastal road.

Li. Gen. Cao Van Vien, the country's top general, broadcast an order of the day to his troops telling them to "stop the enemy and destroy them."

"We have only one way and that is to fight for our survival," he said. "The historic hour has come. From this moment on all of us must stand on all fronts. Stop the enemy and destroy them and counterattack strongly."

Vien conferred with Thieu, Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, the U. S. Army chief of staff, and high Vietnamese officers. There were reports the military had given Thieu three days to step down.

Military sources said government troops and most civilians pulled out of two more provincial capitals — Phan Rang, capital of Ninh Thuan Province 30 miles south of Cam Ranh Bay, and Phan Thiet, 100 miles east of Saigon.

Defense says Connally never received bribe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A defense lawyer said Wednesday former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally never received a bribe and the man who accused him of doing so actually kept the $10,000 for himself.

"He did not at anytime receive anything whatsoever from the milk producers or Mr. Jake Jacobsen or anyone else," chief defense lawyer Edward Bennett Williams said in a two-hour opening statement at Connally's bribery trial.

Williams accused Jacobsen, a former White House legislative counsel and the prosecution's star witness, of keeping the alleged bribe of $10,000 for himself and then scheming to place blame on Connally.

"He converted it to his own use. He embezzled the money," Williams said.

Connally is charged with two counts of allegedly accepting a bribe of $10,000 in 1971 for his help as treasury secretary in obtaining an increase in the government price support for raw milk. At the time, Jacobsen, a friend of Connally for 25 years, was a lawyer for the milk producers.

The trial in U.S. district court was to resume Thursday with Agriculture Department economist Don Paarlberg testifying about parity and price supports.

In a 46-minute low-key opening statement, Assistant Watergate Prosecutor Jon A. Sale charged that a month after the increase, Connally reminded Jacobsen of his help in getting the increase and the milk producers' political contributions and asked, "You think you can get some of that money for me?"

John Connally

Energy consumption down 2.2 per cent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy consumption in the United States unexpectedly fell 2.2 per cent in 1974 after climbing steadily for more than two decades, Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton reported Wednesday.

"This is the first decrease since 1952," Morton said. "I am delighted . . . I hope we are seeing the start of a new trend."

If the reversal is a trend, he said, it means conservation efforts can effectively supplement President Ford's drive to increase U.S. energy production and lower reliance on foreign oil supplies.

Morton said demand for heat, light and power of all kinds required the energy equivalent of 73,121 trillion British thermal units in 1974, compared to 74,743 in 1973. There are about 5.8 million BTUs in a single barrel of oil.

In contrast with the 2.2 per cent overall drop in 1974, Morton said, energy consumption climbed at an average annual rate of 4.1 per cent from 1960 through 1973.

"Five things accounted for most of the 1974 decrease — the Arab oil embargo, higher prices, the economic slowdown, successful conservation efforts and a relatively mild winter," he said.

Figures compiled by the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines showed the biggest drop in a single area — 3.4 per cent — was for transportation. Jet fuel use declined 5.9 per cent from 1973, while gasoline use fell off by 2.1 per cent.

Consumption was lower for all energy sources except utility hydropower and nuclear power, the figures showed.

The figures reflected some potentially long-range shifts in the nation's energy picture.

The government encouraged utility companies to start burning coal instead of relatively scarce oil and natural gas in their power plants. As a result, the share of electricity produced by coal increased from 54 per cent in 1973 to 56.1 per cent in 1974.

Although estimated crude oil imports rose 7.2 per cent to 1.27 billion barrels, the net imports of all fuels fell by 4.4 per cent from the 1973 level, largely because of a 12 per cent drop in imports of refined petroleum products.

Chicago skips formal bid for Democratic Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Complete with slide shows and promises of free bus service for everyone, Kansas City and Cleveland presented formal bids today for the 1976 Democratic National Convention.

A third tentatively scheduled presentation was washed out when Chicago officials said they had decided not to make a formal bid for the convention.

The Democrats' Site Selection Committee was to hear from four other cities Thursday — Los Angeles, New Orleans, Miami Beach, and New York — before visiting the proposed sites and recommending a convention location for next year.

The Kansas City presentation, headed by Mayor Charles B. Wheeler, was the more lavish.

Wheeler and a contingent of civic and political figures urged the Democrats to return to their city, where the party held its 1976 "mini-convention" to use the new H. Roe Bartle convention hall and a brace of new hotels.

The Cleveland presentation came from Republican Mayor Ralph Perk and several Democratic officials. They said there were 11,500 hotel rooms within 15 minutes of their convention hall, and if the traveling time were doubled to permit use of rooms in Akron or other communities, "we can come up with 20,000 rooms."

Chess champ Fischer told: defend title or lose it

The International Chess Federation in Amsterdam Wednesday gave superstar Bobby Fischer 27 more hours to answer its ultimatum: Lay your title on the line or lose it by default. The new deadline: 5 a.m. CDT Thursday. A match would be the second largest purse in history for a competitive event. The largest was a $10 million purse shared by Muhammad Ali and George Foreman at their championship fight in Zaire last year.

Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Wednesday that even though "the smell of defeat is strong in South Vietnam" aid should continue to be sent. Rusk said "I believe that food and ammunition should be sent while there is yet a chance for the people to receive and use it because millions of South Vietnamese need help and have no one else to turn to." In other Vietnam comments: Sen. John Tunney D-Calif., said President Ford should bring pressure on Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu to negotiate a "political accommodation" with the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese to avoid a "blood bath." . . . In Paris, Madame Nguyen Thi Blah, Viet Cong foreign minister, said she could not rule out shelling attacks on Saigon in the current Communist offensive.

President Ford plans to name a Cabinet officer's husband as his deputy counsel. Roderick M. Hills, husband of Housing Secretary Carla Hills, will be named deputy to White House counsel Philip W. Buchen. Press Secretary Ron Nessen said of the relationship, that "both are competent in their fields."

To illustrate the size of the daily growth in the oil countries' money, Sawhill said 10 days worth could buy the Bank of America; 143 days could buy IBM; 9.2 years of the surplus could cover all of the securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange; and 15.6 years would equal the worth of "all the companies on all the world's major stock markets."

School libraries not just books anymore

by KATHERINE BOYCE

To some people a library means a stack of dusty books, straight-back chairs that scrape across the floor and a librarian who always frowns.

But today that's just a stereotype. You won't find many libraries like that in schools in the Northwest suburbs. They've been transformed by some of the new trends in education which have filtered through school after school over the last decade. What used to be the school library is now called the learning resource center, or, in some districts, the instructional materials center.

The resource center hardly resembles the library of a generation ago. It still contains books, but that's only part of the story. Phonographs, closed-circuit television, tape recorders, film strips and "media kits" share a place with the card

THE FAMILIAR sign proclaiming "Silence" won't be found in the resource center. It is not a place where children come in once a week to check out a book. The resource center is a hub of activity in a typical school. Students come and go every day and no one seems to mind if they whisper to each other or suddenly cry out when listening to a tape cassette.

The stern librarian sitting behind her desk is just a ghost of the past. Today a resource center director constantly works with children, answering questions, helping them find materials, teaching them to use the machines and helping them with class projects. Many of them are certified teachers and they work along with classroom teachers, scheduling assignments for the children. "The idea is an open concept," said

Most schools today use an individualized instruction method in the classroom, a system that is programmed to the abilities of each child. In the classroom students work alone or in groups with students of their ability and the teacher assigns lessons and projects to fit each group.

When the neat rows of desks lost their place in the classroom it became obvious to many educators that the school library no longer fit the new pattern. Today the resource center is an extension of the classroom. Students working on assignments or projects can come to the center where they use the varied materials.

machines often without help. "We have underestimated the ability of kids to operate machines," Mrs. Hanson said. An elementary school child can learn to use a tape recorder or film strip reader as quickly — sometimes more quickly — than an adult, she said.

The resource centers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 were recently honored in national competition. This year Dist. 15 was one of eight finalists in competition sponsored by the American Library Assoc. and it was the only district in Illinois that made the finals.

THE RESOURCE center at Central Road School is set up so it can be used easily by the children. All the materials carry a color code. "I'm not totally ignoring the Dewey Decimal System," Mrs. Hanson said, but the colors make it easier for younger children to find materials. All the materials that deal with language arts are coded red, math is green, science is orange, fine arts is red and social studies is yellow.

The reading center takes up one area of the resource center. Students in kindergarten, first or second grades can walk into the reading area, pick out a book and sprawl on the carpet to page through a Dr. Seuss book or "Winnie the Pooh."

The kids love the resource centers, said Carolyn Rohrer, program director of Dist. 15 instructional resources. They're fascinated by the materials and they like working on their own. She said a sixth grader at Central Road School once told her, "Our resource center is an arsenal of educational weapons to battle boredom . . . the best thing since lunch time."

Farmhouse to be museum or school site?

A vacant farmhouse in the Moon Lake Village development of Hoffman Estates planned for a historical museum also is being sought as a school site.

The farmhouse, which a newly-formed village historical society has eyed for the museum, also is being considered by Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 for a potential second school site for the Moon Lake Village area. The district has entered into the discussions between Moon Lake and village officials on use of the site.

"We're having a bit of a hassle because the school district thinks they should have two sites there," Marilyn Lind, chairman of the Poplar Creek Historical Society, said Wednesday. She said the number of school children coming from the subdivision on Higgins Road east of Barrington Road is less than developers originally expected, but she said the district is studying whether a second site might be necessary for enrollments in five to six years.

THE HISTORICAL society in September began plans to have the site donated by the Moon Lake Village developers. Historical relics from the Schaumburg Township area and the village would be housed in the museum.

The opening of the museum had been hoped for by 1976 to coincide with the Bicentennial celebration in the village, but Mrs. Lind said the uncertainty surrounding the matter now has also left the village's Bicentennial plans unclear.

Mrs. Lind, who also is chairing the village's Bicentennial celebration committee, said the village hopes to receive partial funding for the celebration from the state and possibly several national organizations which are also providing grants for local 1976 festivities.

However, she said plans detailing the village's Bicentennial efforts must be submitted to the state by April 15 to qualify for funding consideration. Uncertainty on the museum situation has forced her to delay preparation of a final proposal.

"What I may do is send the plans and word it in such a way that if it doesn't work out, we just won't get the funds," she said. "In the meantime, we're kind of floating."

THE HISTORICAL group has hopes of restoring the farmhouse and establishing a museum which residents will be able to tour. Mrs. Lind said funds which could be obtained from the state for the project would be matching funds, supplementing money allocated by the village or raised through contributions.

Powwow planned in Des Plaines

It appears likely that an authentic Indian powwow will be conducted in Des Plaines this summer as part of the city's Bicentennial celebration with final details for the event to be completed by Friday.

David Wolf, chairman of the city's Bicentennial Commission, Wednesday said he is drawing up a contract which will spell out commitments on the part of the city, Maine West High School and the Indians.

Wolf said he hopes to have the contract completed by Friday, meet with City Atty. Charles Hug to review it and have it ready in time to present to the city council for approval Monday. The contract also will be presented to the High School Dist. 207 Board of Education for action.

If the contract is approved by the city and the school board, Wolf said he hopes to arrange a public signing of the document Tuesday.

NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN school officials, members of the Bicentennial Commission and the Mascutin Indian Society, who will participate in the powwow, ended Tuesday after a 3½-hour meeting. Wolf said a tentative agreement was reached with all sides.

Officials at Maine West, where the event will be conducted if agreement is reached, expressed concern when plans for the powwow were first discussed that the ceremonial dance might damage the football turf. Officials also voiced concern over the number of persons the event would draw and whether the high school was an adequate facility for the program.

Wolf said officials asked that other cities and schools which have sponsored such events be contacted to determine what problems they had with it. Every school and city contacted responded that the event was successful and posed few if any problems, Wolf said.

"It's my feeling that we have resolved the concerns of the administration at Maine West and the superintendent's office," Wolf said. "In addition we have obtained documentation from previous powwows on the way they were handled and we have received assurances from the Mascutins on security of the camp site, hours for the performances and the type of Indian interpretive dancing to be part of the project."

THE MASCUTINS conduct an annual powwow or Indian dance competition throughout the country starting from the West coast in May and traveling to the east coast where they conclude their program by late fall.

"I think the meeting Tuesday was an excellent expression of cooperation and willingness to work together on the part of these three entities (the high school, the city and the Indians) to bring to Des Plaines a spectacle that we think will be a tremendously educational and historical documentation of Indian lore," Wolf said.

More intra-city buses needed in Des Plaines

The North Suburban Mass Transit District should place emphasis on improving intra-city bus service in Des Plaines, according to members of the city's special transportation committee.

The committee met Wednesday with Rex Wilson, the city's representative to the NORTHRAN board, and Mayor Herbert Behrel to discuss a survey which NORTHRAN has asked each of its members to complete.

In answer to another question on NORTHRAN's list of discussion items, the committee said high priority areas in need of immediate transit service include commercial and industrial areas. Service to the Chicago and North Western Ry. stations also should be given priority, the committee said.

WILSON SAID the city should suggest NORTHRAN consider more regular routes and increased frequency as priority items.

The committee said inadequate service to the city's industrial area in the southwest section is one of the worst problems now facing the city's transit system.

Major streets which should have regular bus service include Touhy Avenue, Oakton Street, Wolf Road, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Thacker Road and Mannheim Road, the committee said.

THE SURVEY is designed to help NORTHRAN's planning department determine the needs of each of its member communities and then develop bus routes for both intra and inter-city service.

In addition to the survey questions, NORTHRAN asks each member to send it information on land use, zoning, street systems, population, major traffic generators and other census-type information.

Behrel said he would forward all the required information to NORTHRAN today. Wilson said he will contact Lois Levey, NORTHRAN's manager of planning, to set up a meeting between city transportation committee members and Miss Levey to discuss the survey and future bus service in Des Plaines.

Campus Life plans to collect bottles

The Campus Life Youth Guidance Program will sponsor a fund-raising drive in Elk Grove Village April 12 and April 19. The group plans to collect returnable pop bottles to raise money for summer-camp programs.

Greg Monaco, the group's youth guidance director for Elk Grove Village, said information will be distributed to residents this weekend on the collection. Volunteers will pick up bottles the following two weekends.

The group is a nonprofit inter-denominational organization that works with teenagers from Elk Grove Village who have been referred for counseling by schools, the courts or police.

Water, sewer budget review on agenda

Elk Grove Village officials Monday will review a proposed $1.3 million water and sewer budget that reflects a 3.3 per cent increase over the current fiscal year's expenses.

"Although we anticipate $667,836 in excess revenue, the staff and village manager's recommendations are to hold expenses down and hang on to the surplus," said George Coney, finance director.

The preliminary 1975-76 water and sewer budget fund, released Wednesday, is the village manager's recommendation and has not been reviewed by the budget committee.

THE CHAIRMAN of the committee, Theodore Stoddler, has called a 7:30 p.m. meeting Monday in the municipal building, 901 Wellington Ave., to review the water and sewer fund and $8,618 Civil Defense budget. The committee last month reviewed the general corporate fund portion of the budget which called for a 5 per cent pay increase for all village workers.

In contrast to the water and sewer fund, the general corporate fund expenses reflect a 12 per cent increase over the current budget while anticipated revenues are only expected to increase by 7 per cent.

Village officials however said that by using about $400,000 in surplus funds in the corporate fund a tax increase will be avoided.

Although the water and sewer fund shows a slight increase in expenses, several major projects are contemplated.

A $2,800 EXPENDITURE is recommended by the manager for maintenance of the three water reservoirs.

The two ground level and third elevated tank must be cleaned and painted. Another expenditure of $20,000 is earmarked for updating the central alarm system.

The budget sets aside $95,000 for maintenance of wells in 1975-76 instead of the $162,000 budgeted last year.

Coney said the village spent about $10,000 on well maintenance last year. He said the village expects to spend close to $95,000 on well renovation this year. "In contrast to previous budgets where we may have overestimated anticipated expenditures this budget is what can be described as a close-to-the-bone budget," he said.

Retains adult services duties

Steiner named to library post

Janet Steiner, head of adult services at the Elk Grove Village Public Library, has been named administrative librarian by the library board.

Miss Steiner is scheduled to assume the position June 1 and will continue her duties in the adult services division as well as taking on new duties. Her salary is set at $17,000.

She replaces Mary Clark, who resigned two months ago to accept a job as head librarian at the Aurora Public Library. Miss Clark gained national attention last fall when Kiwanis International learned she joined the local chapter of the all-male organization. She later dropped out of the club rather than accept the reduced membership status offered her by local Kiwanis officials who were threatened with loss of their charter.

MISS STEINER, 27, has managed the adult services division of the library since joining the library staff last July. A native of Racine, Wis., she received her bachelor's degree from Dominican College (now the College of Racine) in 1969, a Master's degree in library science from the University of Wisconsin in 1971 and recently completed a master's degree in English at Marquette University.

Before coming to Elk Grove, Miss Steiner taught children's and adolescents' literature at the College of Racine and she also has worked at the Racine Public Library, the Marquette University Library and as librarian for the Dane County bookmobile in Wisconsin.

Miss Clark said she was happy with the board's choice of Miss Steiner as her replacement.

"I'm delighted both professionally and personally," Miss Clark commented. "Janet has shown such a wealth of talent in the eight months she's been in Elk Grove."

Scouting news

The Arrow of Light award, the highest rank in Cub Scouting, was received by Joe Jablonski.

Jeff Zommer, Matt Sronkoski, John Balla and Steve Fulton received their Webelos colors and were welcomed into the den.

Paul Carozzo, Clint Ellischer, Bob Ford, Tom Rogers and Steve Unglaub received the Wolf rank.

Gold and silver arrow points were received by Matt Sronkoski, John Musnicki, Bill Reichenbacher, Clint Ellischer, Bob Ford, Steve Unglaub, Tom Rogers, David Tregay.

Matt Maynard was inducted into the pack in the rank of Bobcat.

The Cubs are selling Scout-O-Rama tickets for the April 19-20 show. The Scout selling 10 or more tickets will receive a special Bicentennial neckerchief which can be worn with his uniform until the end of 1976.

The Scouts have collected more than 250 pounds of books for their sponsor, the Rotary Club of Elk Grove Village. The book drive will continue through April.

Mental health center has board openings

There are several openings for residents interested in serving on the board of directors or committees at the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

Two seats are available on the board, and volunteers also are needed to serve on committees for fund-raising, programs and facilities planning.

One of the openings on the board is due to the resignation of Susan Westlake. The other seat on the board has been vacant for several months.

Anyone interested in a position on the board or a committee should call the mental health center at 593-6690. The only qualification is that applicants be residents of either Elk Grove or Schaumburg township.

Day-treatment set for disturbed

The Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center expects to begin a day-treatment program for emotionally disturbed adults in about six weeks.

Jordan Rosen, executive director of the center in Elk Grove Village, Wednesday said he has received word that the center will get a grant of about $14,000 from the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health to fund the program. About $3,000 also will be sought from each of the townships to underwrite costs, he said.

Village blood plan 200 donors short

The Elk Grove Village Blood Replacement Program is short 200 donors for its April 12 blood drawing.

The village participates through the North Suburban Blood Center in a community blood-assurance program that assures residents and their families unlimited blood replacement from any hospital in the country.

Rosen said the state grant and township monies will finance the program for the first three months. Funds to continue it after that already have been earmarked in the center's budget for next year.

THE PROGRAM is intended to provide more intensive counseling than is offered by the clinic to help adults with emotional problems avoid hospitalization.

To maintain its coverage for the year, 4 per cent of the community, or about 1,000 persons must donate this year.

Nancy Yiannias, Elk Grove Village health coordinator, said the village attempts to recruit more than 250 donors at each of the four village draws. "We try to get over what we need in case of Vocational rehabilitation and other services will be included in the program for patients leaving hospitals to aid them in making a smooth transition back into their families and communities.

The program calls for a full-time staff consisting of a director, psychiatric nurse, activity therapist and vocational therapist to work with patients a minimum of five sessions per week, five hours per session.

IN ELK GROVE Village the program is entering its second quarter. There were 150 pints donated at the first draw and 150 are scheduled for April 12. "We should have 500 pints assured to date and are 200 short of our goal," said Mrs. Yiannias.

At least one-fourth of the treatment hours are to be scheduled in the evening to accommodate patients unable to participate during the day. A psychiatrist also will be employed on a part-time basis for consultation and medical review.

ROSEN SAID he anticipates it will take about six weeks to hire and train the staff and to obtain a facility to use for the program. Possible locations such as a local church or similar building with rooms for group therapy and vocational rehabilitation activities are being investigated.

Estimates are that about 10 per cent of the patients being treated at the center will be able to benefit from the program that will be open only to residents of Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships.

Besides mental-health-center patients, Rosen has said he expects the program's participants also could include persons referred by area hospitals, physicians or other mental health agencies.

Taxes to cover '76 election: lobby

The 1976 presidential election will be financed by American taxpayers who have designated a $1 checkoff on their income tax forms, according to predictions by Common Cause, a citizens' lobby in Washington, D.C.

Common Cause has urged public financing of election campaigns to eliminate candidates' reliance on big contributors. Latest estimates are that more than $80 million will be available for presidential candidates by the end of 1975.

The financing law allows major-party candidates to receive up to $20 million from the Presidential Election Campaign Fund. Common Cause is urging Congressmen to approve a mixed system of public and private financing for their own elections.

The $1 checkoff on income-tax forms does not cost the taxpayer anything extra. It merely designates where a portion of his taxes will go. Under the law, presidential candidates will get federal funds during primary elections after they qualify by raising a substantial number of small donations. Candidates will have to raise $5,000 in contributions of $250 or less in each of 20 states. The federal money will be used to match the private donations for up to $5 million, or half the candidate's spending limit for the primary.

State Rep.
Donald

After the primary elections, the Republican and Democratic nominees will be guaranteed up to $20 million each. Minor party candidates who get at least 5 per cent of the vote will get a proportionate share. The two major parties also will receive $2 million to finance presidential nominating conventions.

Health-care standards hit

Establishment of standards for health care under an amendment to the federal State Sen.

John J.
Nimrod

social security laws will reduce the quality of medical care and violate the privacy of medical records, said State Rep. Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates.

Totten said the amendment, which requires establishment of Professional Standards Review organizations, would allow government inspection of medical records and would allow government officials to set norms for medical treatment. "This is the imposition of a dehumanizing pseudo-scientific system that tells us medical treatment can be codified in a cookbook format," Totten said.

Bill for seniors introduced

State Sen. John J. Nimrod, R-Niles, is trying to get legislation that would allow senior citizens to defer payment of property taxes until their deaths. The taxes would be paid out of an individual's estate, he says.

Nimrod has introduced the legislation because he says senior citizens are often forced to move out of their homes to pay for medical bills and other costs. A 6 per cent interest rate would be charged on the deferred payments. Local government would still get regular tax revenue because the deferred payments would be covered by loans from the state, Nimrod said.

The measure would also improve neighborhoods, Nimrod said. "Elderly people remain at home nearly all day long, continually upgrading their property."

77 support flood bill

At least 77 congressmen are supporting legislation that would remove federal sanctions against communities that decide not to participate in the federal flood-insurance program. Communities that already joined the program to avoid the sanctions would also be allowed to withdraw.

"Unless this bill is passed," said U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, "12 months after the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development designates an area as being flood-prone, property owners or purchasers in that area will be ineligible to receive most mortgage and all federally insured loans if their community has not joined the flood-insurance program and they have purchased the subsidized insurance. Furthermore, the communities themselves would be ineligible for any federal-aid program in the designated areas."

As of Dec. 31, 1974, HUD designated 719 flood-prone areas in Illinois, and only 267 had decided to enroll in the federal flood insurance program, Crane said. Local communities that have enrolled but could withdraw include Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg and Wheeling. Designation of flood-prone areas has been controversial because many communities disagree with the federal decisions, Crane said.

Toll-free number for taxpayer assistance in county: 641-2150

The Illinois Dept. of Revenue announced that toll-free telephone assistance to taxpayers from Cook County will be available between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. Saturdays, April 5 and 12.

The number Cook County residents should call for the free assistance with 1974 state income tax returns is 641-2150. The telephone service is regularly available between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

The department advised that help would be available for only 1974 state income tax returns.

Taxpayers can obtain assistance between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays at any of these Chicago-area district offices of the Revenue Dept.:

In Chicago, 160 N. LaSalle St. (Loop); 3210 N. Nordica Ave. (Northwest); 2360 E. 71st St. (South); and 9415 S. Western Ave. (Southwest); and in Lincolnwood, 7101 N. Cicero Ave. (North).

The deadline for filing 1974 returns is April 15.

Many kick themselves for taking off studs

The most disgruntled motorists in Wednesday's blizzard traffic jams were the law abiding citizens who obeyed state law and removed studded snow tires from their cars by April 1.

"We changed 80 million of them yesterday, an excited attendant reported from Jerry's Northwest Standard Service, Arlington Heights. "Now they are all running into each other. That's why they're all killing themselves."

A mechanic at the Rolling Meadows Union 76 station said it was "a hell of a day to have taken them off. I bet they wished they had kept them on."

Area police were busily answering a flood of accident calls but for the time being relaxed an anticipated ticket-writing session for those with studded tires on their cars.

"That's all we did (remove tires) the last two days from 7 in the morning to 10 at night," said an attendant at the South Point Mobil Service Station in Prospect Heights.

"We changed 25 sets of tires each of the last two days. Before that we changed maybe 25 the last two weeks."

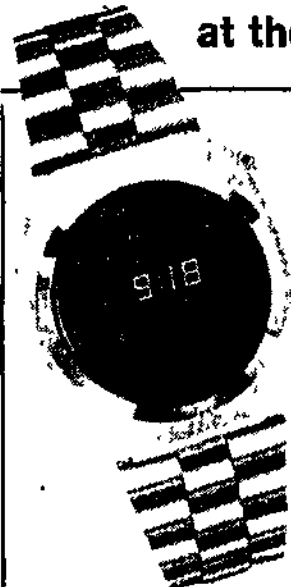

No one reported anyone foolish enough to have their tires changed in the middle of the snowstorm but at least one motorist had his snow tires put back on for a trip to Springfield. And they were studded tires, at that. "He said there was no snow removal equipment down there," the attendant at South Point said.

Dow dips 1.02 to 760.56; trading light

Stocks off slightly in 3rd straight loss

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market lost ground for the third consecutive session Wednesday.

Analysts said investors were putting money into the bond market, which is experiencing a flood of corporate financings. In addition, they said, developments in South Vietnam and the Middle East dampened investor enthusiasm.

The Dow Jones Industrial average lost 1.02 points to 760.56. It was off about 2 points at the outset but jumped almost 6 points higher shortly before noon in a rally that lasted about an hour.

Other averages also suffered. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 0.21 to 82.43. The average price of a NYSE common share declined by seven cents. Declines topped advances, 744 to 565, among the 1,789 issues crossing the tape.

TURNOVER TOTALLED only 15,600,000 shares, compared with 14,840,000 Tuesday, the slowest trading session since early January.

World Airways, which has been flying refugees in South Vietnam, gained 7/8. The company reported year-end earnings of $2.15 a share, compared with 10 cents a year ago.

A number of oil firms said their earnings would be trimmed by the government's new tax law and the issues lost ground. Exxon fell 5/8 after saying it would have $200 million less for capital expenditures because of repeal of the oil-depletion allowance for major companies.

Tecaco, which lost 3/8 in active trading, said the law cost it $24 million in the first two months of this year. California Standard, off 1/4, said the law would cut its earnings by $90 million.

OTHER OILS AND related issues were mixed.

American Telephone & Telegraph warrants led the actives, off 1/4 to 11/16 on 326,500 traded. Great Western Financial was the second most active Big Board issue, off 1/8 to 15 3/8 on 322,400 shares, including a block of 223,900 shares at 15. Prices closed mixed in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share declined by two cents. Volume totaled 1,738,000 shares, compared with 1,725,000 traded Tuesday.

On inheritance taxes...

My wife and I have all our property and other assets in joint ownership, with right of survivorship. If either of us dies, will the other have to pay any inheritance taxes?

That depends on the size of your estate. In Illinois any taxes on joint-tenancy assets are imposed as though they were held in equal shares. The surviving spouse is granted a $20,000 exemption. If the estate is less than this there would be no tax. Starting with anything more than $20,000 there is a graduated tax schedule.

Brinkley: newscasting's Hemingway

WASHINGTON — A minute after you leave David Brinkley's booklined office at WRC-TV, you start talking like the NBC newscaster. Even when you stop, your mind echoes the short, punchy style that has made Brinkley's name a household word.

"He's an original," said John Chancellor, Brinkley's colleague on the NBC Nightly News. "David was the first genuinely successful newscaster to use satire and acerbic wit to poke fun at institutions. It was a rare talent and he made it work — and he did it first."

Although Brinkley's dry wit and passion for brevity were his trademark since his early days with United Press in Nashville, his national reputation was made when he teamed with Chet Huntley for NBC's coverage of the 1956 presidential conventions.

At that time, one TV critic wrote: "Mr. Brinkley quite possibly could be the forerunner of a new school of television commentary; he is not an earnest voice of authority imparting the final word to the unwashed in videoland. Instead of the pear-shaped tones, he has just a trace of a soft Carolina drawl. He contributes his observations with assurance but not insistence."

AFTER THE conventions, Huntley and Brinkley were paired on NBC's evening news show, but their success at the convention did not carry over in race against CBS — at least not at first. It took nearly a year before the team of "Good Night David; Good Night Chet" was on top, and at one point the ratings were so low that both men thought they would be given their walking papers.

"The first year we were on we were bad," said Brinkley, 54. "The program was bad, the writing was bad. It was mostly newsreels. It was the first attempt to do a television news show. But then we began to come together, although we could have been pronounced a failure. I wasn't particularly worried. I was in my 30s and I could always go back to writing."

"But Chet was worried. He thought he might not last. So he bought a cattle ranch in New Jersey — a feeding operation. Needless to say it failed, but he didn't."

AFTER THE FIRST year, the Huntley-Brinkley team was off and running, and they either were No. 1 or No. 2 in the ratings from 1957 to 1970, the year Huntley signed off. He died of cancer last year. Brinkley admits he misses his partner.

touches of wit, he has been called "David Twinkley."

"Well," he said with a chuckle, "that one came about because I was the only one who could write a funny story. Huntley just couldn't write a funny story. He gave the punch line away in the first line. So when it came to writing a light piece, I always wrote it."

There have been a lot of newsmen who have come and gone since David Brinkley made his name. Many are still before the camera; others have drifted off. Yet, Brinkley remains, and so will his irreverence and his dot and dash delivery. Both were imitated, but never equaled. Like Hemingway, he is one of a kind.

NOTES: Sidney Poitier is the first of many top stars announced to appear in Columbia Pictures' 50th anniversary television special scheduled for April on ABC.

Dale Robertson will star as G-Man Melvin Purvis in "The Kansas City Massacre," a two-hour ABC-TV movie.

Jack Palance will star in "Buckley," a 90-minute television movie and possible weekly series created by Carroll O'Connor of "All In The Family" fame.

Universal TV will produce "Don Adams' Screen Test," a 30-minute series for syndication.

Man injured in CTA crash

A collision and derailment in the Harlem Avenue terminal of the Chicago Transit Authority delayed an estimated 36,000 passengers and injured a CTA motorman Wednesday.

CTA spokesman Thomas Buck said a motorman failed to stop at a signal as he entered the Forest Park terminal, striking the rear of another westbound train, which he pushed into a third train on a crossover track. Four cars were derailed in the 4 a.m. crash, blocking equipment needed for rush-hour service. Overcrowding of a northbound Dan Ryan train later delayed traffic when passengers prevented train doors from closing. The trains will not operate with open doors.

Marriott Lincolnshire resort opens with a double roar!

ZAMBA THE LION stole the show Wednesday when the lights momentarily were turned out and he took off down a row of seats occupied by guests at dedication ceremonies for the $20 million Marriott Lincolnshire Resort.

by STEVE NOVICK
Marriott's Lincolnshire Resort had its ribbon-cutting Wednesday with a lion and a roar rushing through a crowd of 450 guests and dignitaries who attended.

The lion was Zamba, a 450-pound feline called upon to break the ribbon on stage at the Drury Lane North Theater located as part of the resort, 111. Rte. 21 and Half Day Road, Lincolnshire.

After taking two leaps down at the ribbon from a raised platform Zamba ate a key made out of hamburger, symbolizing the Marriott resort will always be open.

THE ROAR CAME FROM the crowd after the lights went out while Zamba was being ushered from the theater. He got a little scared and started to head for home, said Jim Peacock, Marriott spokesman.

Zamba's route was directly down an aisle of seats occupied by guests, and the lion's skittish behavior led to a moment of turmoil in the theater as he dragged his trainer, Kent Douglas.

No one was hurt and laughter broke out after the incident.

The $20 million Lincolnshire Resort is a place "I sure hope you'll use," said J. Willard Marriott, founder and chairman of the Marriott Corp. "We spent our last dollar here."

"I understand there are nine million people within an easy reach of this place. I sure hope we'll get a few of them."

The resort offers a variety of recreational facilities. There is an 18-hole golf course, six enclosed tennis courts, indoor and outdoor swimming pools, a game room, health spas and more.

THE KING'S WHARF, built on eight levels, is one of three restaurants besides rooms available for convention meetings and catered affairs.

"You don't have to drive all the way to Lake Geneva now," quipped J. W. Marriott Jr., president of Marriott Corp.

U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, said, "Your life, liberty and property are safe until next Monday. Congress is in recess until then."

Zamba's appearance followed.

Family doctor to be topic at Park Ridge

The family doctor, the new medical specialty, will be discussed at 8 p.m. April 10 in the chapel-auditorium at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

Dr. Philip Heller, head of the hospital's family practice department, will explain the new specialty, which is an offshoot of the nearly extinct general practitioner. A tour of the family practice department at Lutheran General is also included in the program.

Dr. Tom Beamer, second-year resident in the family practice program, will also speak. The program, free to the public, is sponsored by the hospital's Men's Assn.

Wife gets the property

My sister-in-law told me she would inherit my late brother's entire estate because he didn't leave a will. Since they were married only a couple of years and I am his only relative, aren't I entitled to a portion of what he left?

Not according to the law. If your brother didn't leave a will and he has no surviving children, grandchildren or other descendants, his wife is entitled to all his property.

5 running for Harper College board seats

by WANDALYN RICE

Five candidates are competing for two three-year terms on the Harper College board of trustees Saturday, April 12.

Included among the candidates are Robert Moats, 408 S. Wa-Pella, Mount Prospect, the father of present board member Lawrence Moats, and Rance V. Buehler, 402 Firestone Dr., Hoffman Estates, the next-door neighbor of board member Robert Rausch.

Other candidates for the board are Warren Franczyk, 1039 Old Mill Dr., Palatine; James J. McKenna, 3901 Wilko Rd., Rolling Meadows; and Natalie Weber, 606 Bryce Tr., Roselle.

Following are the views of the candidates:

Robert Moats

Robert Moats, 54, admits that the fact he is running for the board at the time his son is vacating his seat "gives a lot of people a chance for humorous comment."

However, Moats says his idea of running for the board is not new. "Larry was urging me to run before he ever ran for the board," he says. "That was six years ago." Since then, Moats, an electronics engineer for Warner Electronics Tubes Inc., has served on the electronics advisory committee for Harper and has had a chance to look at the college up close. The college, he says, "is quite an asset to the community."

One area Moats says he will be concerned about as a board member is the budget. He says his examination of this year's budget indicates that about 58 percent of the education fund is going for classroom teachers and 42 percent is being spent in support services — including administration, the library and counselors.

As a board member, he says he will keep a close eye on the cost of support services that "tend to take on a life of their own. As the college grows I would want to see the primary increase come in terms of the people who meet the students in the classroom."

Moats supports the college's efforts to get a second site in Arlington Heights because "I don't know of anyone who has gotten burned buying land they found out later they didn't need."

He also says he would hope as a board member to improve the sometimes strained relationship between the college faculty and the board. "It takes two to polarize," he says. "If there is a problem it's got to be shared by all the parties. I don't think the faculty should be door-mats."

James J. McKenna

Harper College should start planning now to become a four-year school, James J. McKenna says.

McKenna, 55, manager of properties and facilities for Continental Airlines, says he is running for the board because both he and his daughter have attended classes at the school "at the present time we have a school that is second to none."

He says he would like to see the college become a four-year commuter college because the area needs such a school. And he also opposes the idea of a second campus. "I feel they should work on the campus we now have," he says. "I don't think you'd have as much control on a second campus."

McKenna would like college officials to become involved with planning for the Regional Transportation Authority to provide bus service to the campus. He does not believe the college's budget can be cut. "You pay for what you get," he says.

McKenna believes the college administration is "very good." He says, "I think the administration and board of trustees should be commended on the job they have done."

Natalie Weber

Natalie Weber, 37, will graduate from the Harper College Journalism program in June and she hopes as a board member she can encourage increases in the college's community service programs.

Mrs. Weber, a free-lance advertising copywriter, says she is particularly interested in the college's women's and senior citizen's programs and in SEEK, a program for gifted elementary school children the college is just developing. "As a board member I picture myself as

JAMES J. McKenna

NATALIE WEBER

WARREN FRANCZYK

trying to give my endorsement and my push to these programs because the college can't just concentrate on the students coming out of high school," she says.

She hopes the college can reorganize so the administration and faculty will work more closely together. In addition, she says, she sees no reason why the faculty should not have a nonvoting seat on the board. "I just can't feel that a single person trying to articulate the interests of the faculty can be a threat to me as a board member," she says.

Mrs. Weber supports a second site for the college because of the increasing number of adult students she expects to return to the school. The site in Arlington Heights, she says, is good because "you have to go where land is available."

Warren Franczyk

Warren Franczyk received his doctorate degree after writing a dissertation about the work of school boards. As a member of the Harper College board of trustees he says that background will come in handy.

School boards, he says, are seldom involved directly in the kind of policy-making most board members think is their major job. Instead, they spend a lot of time on routine work and on overseeing the administration.

As a member of the Harper board, Franczyk, 35, says he would try to ensure dialog at board meetings on controversial subjects. "You must raise questions on the floor," he says, adding that he supports board members Robert Rausch and Shirley Munson for their active role in asking questions during board meetings.

Franczyk, who is principal of Sumner Elementary School in Chicago, also says he is concerned about the large number of administrators at the college and the fact that the ratio of administrators to teachers has never been adequately explained.

He says he has "mixed feelings" on the proposed second campus for the college, but agrees that the school should buy land now if enrollment continues to climb. Generally, he says, he is pleased with Harper's educational program. The college, he says, "is constantly coming up with new ideas and programs."

Rance V. Buehler

Rance V. Buehler, 31, says that it is the nature of an executive, whether in the federal government or a local community college, to acquire power.

And as a board member, he says he will see his duty to be "to scrutinize the activities of the president." He says the present Harper board has "too many times been dependent on the administration" and he says that as a board member he will try to avoid that.

Buehler, an attorney, also says the board should avoid large numbers of closed meetings. "The board can't lose sight of the fact the public put them there," he says. "I would have nothing to hide if elected to the board."

Buehler is a neighbor of present Harper board member Robert Rausch and urged Rausch to run a year ago. If he becomes a board member, he says, he and his neighbor would act independently. "Both is independent and I am independent," he says. "I don't think we would necessarily influence each other."

Buehler says he agrees that the college should purchase land for a second campus now, but before a campus should be built, he says, "I would certainly look to see whether the bureaucracy and staffing of the second campus would be a burden to the community."

He says he is impressed with the Harper educational program. "I think the education that the community colleges are involved in is fundamental to preservation of American ideals," he says

Whose river is this?

Herald opinion

Rivers Act deserves passage

It's time the Illinois General Assembly took at least a token step to protect the few unspoiled rivers left in this state.

In past years, agricultural and industrial interests have combined to destroy legislation designed to accomplish such preservation. But in 1975, there's yet another opportunity to approve such legislation.

Virginia Macdonald

Intact is the ban on exploitive land use — other than certain agricultural activities — within an eighth of a mile of the rivers. The effect of this is to preserve, for the public's benefit, the banks along such rivers.

State Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, is a sponsor of one of the bills, which has drawn the backing of such pro-environmental groups as the Great Lakes chapter of the Sierra Club, the Illinois Environmental Council and Palatine's Pollution and Environmental Problems (PEP) group.

It would be desirable, of course, to include the Upper Fox River and the Des Plaines River within this bill, for both need protection against commercial encroachment. But as a minimal goal for the legislature, the passage of this bill is the least the legislature can do for the environment.

The bill under consideration is called the Natural Rivers and Wetlands Act (H.B. 461), along with its companion appropriations bill (H.B. 462). Both would designate seven Illinois river segments (named are the Lower Fox, Kishwaukee, Embarras, Kankakee, Vermillion, Big Creek and Upper Clear Creek and Hutchins Creek) as scenic, natural areas.

Following the legislature's consistent refusal to approve such bills in the past, this is a compromise proposal; some rivers listed in previous bills have been left out.

It isn't enough for The Herald to urge H.B. 461 and 462's passage and to encourage the public to attend hearings on the bill on April 10 before the House Environment, Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

To lend further support, write to your legislators and the Natural Areas Coalition, P.O. Box 2110, Station A, Champaign, Ill. 61820. It's a sad fact of life that heavy lobbying is necessary in Springfield to pass even a meager bill to preserve the few remaining natural riverbanks across Illinois.

Ecology gets a symbol

Move over, Smokey Bear, you've got some competition.

The new kid on the block is Johnny Horizon, created by the U.S. Department of the Interior as the national symbol to fight for cleaner environment.

Although the lad is only five years old, he's going to play a critical part in the 1976 Bicentennial celebration.

Officials of the Interior Department see Johnny as a symbol of environmental concern in this nation's national parks.

"To clean up America for its 200th birthday — then keep it clean" is Johnny's message. If Johnny REALLY helps clean up America, he'll be a welcome addition to this nation's 200th birthday.

He lauds cancer detection support

As president of the Arlington Heights Jaycees, I would like to thank the people of Arlington Heights, through the medium of your Fence Post column, for the gratifying initial response to our pledge to raise $30,000 for the purchase of a thermograph for Northwest Community Hospital.

As you know, one of the primary uses of such equipment is in the early detection of breast cancer in women. And, as any doctor can verify, it is early detection which holds out the greatest hope for cure from this most dreaded of women's diseases.

Our kickoff canvass of the village, held on a recent Saturday, showed that the residents of Arlington Heights will respond with great warmth to an important and worthwhile cause.

The 250 junior high school youngsters and dozens of Jaycees who worked with them canvassed the village, calling at every home. At the end of the day, we had collected more than $6,000 toward our goal.

Additionally, members of the community continue to respond to an ad which appeared in The Herald, and checks arrive daily in the mail.

Accompanying one of those checks was the following letter. Because the person who sent it obviously did not intend for it to be published, I have removed the names to preserve privacy. But the message it carries comes through strong.

It said, in part: "Here's my two dollars. Here's two dollars for the lady who didn't contribute, because she can't grasp the fact that it can happen to her. Here's two dollars in memory of . . . lung cancer. Here's two dollars in memory of . . . leukemia. And, two dollars in memory of . . . breast cancer — she fought the fight and lost."

"Just think how many will win — thanks to early detection by thermography."

The fight is a long way from over. We still have a ways to go on our commitment. We pray that the members of our community will remember, and respond, as they have already, to the remainder of our fund raising activities over the next 15 months.

The almanac

Today is Thursday, April 3, the 93rd day of 1975 with 272 to follow. The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.

American astronaut Virgil Grissom was born April 3, 1926. Actors Doris Day and Marlon Brando were born on this date in 1924.

On this day in history:

• In 1806, the Pony Express postal service began with riders leaving St. Joseph, Mo., and Sacramento, Calif., at the same time.

• In 1865, the Union Army occupied Richmond, Va., one-time capital of the Confederacy.

• In 1962, the federal government ordered New Orleans to integrate the first six grades of public schools.

• In 1971, President Nixon said he would review the case of Lt. William Calley, given a life sentence for his role in the killing of civilians in Vietnam.

A thought for the day: Russian novelist Ivan Turgenev said, "I agree with no man's opinion. I have some of my own."

Fence post letters to the editor

Paramedics applauded

Our family would like to express our sincere gratitude to the Arlington Heights Fire Dept. paramedics who answered my plea for help when my husband had a recent heart seizure.

They arrived at our house in minutes and put my mind at ease the way they went to work immediately, doing what was necessary, and were very efficient and fast. They had him in Northwest Community Hospital and in the heart unit center in no time and were also very kind to me, telling me where to go and what to do. They were just wonderful.

We would also like to thank Leo and Irma Bertoloni who came over after one o'clock in the morning and Anne Marks who came right over. Mr. Bertoloni also drove me to the hospital and stayed with me until we were sure my husband was getting the best of care.

There are many others we would also like to thank, for their concern and kind deeds, but they are too numerous to name.

Indochina without joy

Thailand reviews its politics...

by PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

As defeat piles upon defeat for U.S. supported regimes in Cambodia and South Vietnam, their neighbors are reassessing their own futures and their relations with Washington.

That reassessment in fact has been going on since declaration of the Nixon doctrine in 1969 but becomes the more pressing now with the virtual end of the Lon Nol government in Cambodia and the uncertainty surrounding the continued rule of President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon.

The Nixon doctrine, proclaimed by former President Richard Nixon on a visit to Asian countries, said the United States would keep its treaty obligations but would avoid any future conflict such as the one in Vietnam and would encourage Asian nations to defend themselves.

The withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam, the steady pressure of declining U.S. military aid and the limitations imposed by Congress have made the distant prospect of an accommodation with communist nations an imminent and pressing necessity.

Heading the list is Thailand, scarcely less identified with U.S. military power in Southeast Asia than South Vietnam or Cambodia.

Under its new premier, Kukrit Pramoj, Thailand is moving cautiously but clearly toward a realignment of policy, beginning with withdrawal of the remaining 25,000 American troops and 350 American aircraft there within a year.

It also has been suggested Thailand may also withdraw from the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO), the instrument that provided grounds for U.S. entry into the war in Vietnam.

Thailand has made several moves to improve relations with China and there have been indications she may move soon to seek diplomatic relations. Talks with North Vietnam also are under consideration.

Thailand was used as a base for U.S. air strikes against North Vietnam during the period of direct U.S. involvement and more recently has been used as a main transportation base for the airlift into Phnom Penh.

Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines are making their own moves toward accommodation.

Indonesia has been affected both by declining U.S. military aid and by restrictions imposed by Congress on members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik has declared his confidence in the ability of noncommunist Southeast Asia countries to cooperate with communist regimes in Indochina. In an interview (The New York Times), he said it was clear to him that isolation in the United States is becoming "stronger and stronger."

Malaysia already has relations with China, and the Philippines have made preliminary moves in the same direction.

In 1971, Malaysia, Thailand, the Philippines, Singapore and Indonesia joined in calling for a "zone of peace, freedom and neutrality" in the area. In November, 1974, it was announced from Bangkok that SEATO no longer would be considered a military alliance.

... 'they just lie down and die'

by MIKE NICHOLSON

CAM RANH BAY, South Vietnam — The old woman had fled as far as she could.

Tired, exhausted, weakened by thirst, hunger and days of terror and flight, she just lay down and died. Right on the bleak, sandy waste of what once was a showplace American base, built out of nothing and left with nothing when the Americans departed.

A tired soldier walked in a daze. In his arms he held an object wrapped in part of his military kit.

It was the body of his four-year-old son, who died of heat and thirst in the four-day flight aboard a refugee ship from Da Nang.

He was looking for a suitable place to bury his son properly, as properly as you could in a situation such as this.

The refugees came by boats and ships of all sizes. One fishing boat had only 20 people aboard. A naval vessel carried several thousand.

A few of them were loaded onto trucks. But the vast majority was dumped at docksides and left to fend for themselves.

The sheer numbers of refugees had overcome what little organization there had been.

Soldiers and some of the civilians tried to climb onto any vehicle that passed, not knowing, not caring where it was going.

Some — on the run for two weeks or more and now far from home — decided they could run no more. They sat down under whatever shelter they could find, without food and water, quickly running out of what hopes they might have had that they would be provided for when they arrived.

It was impossible to understand why officials responsible for the refugees did not make some arrangements to meet them, care for their urgent basic needs and tell them where to go and what to do. We rented a fishing boat to get to one area where military refugees were being landed. When we arrived, we were stopped by military and civilian police, who turned their weapons on full automatic and sprayed the water around the boat with bullets.

The police boarded the boat. Without asking questions, they smashed the boat captain's face. I went ashore unmolested but my cameraman and soundman were taken off at gunpoint. We were detained, but not for long.

In one area part of a landing strip had been newly tarred. People trying to walk across lost their shoes because the scorching sun had turned the tar into a sticky mess that held onto their shoes and sandals like a powerful suction cup. The whole area was littered with shoes.

Anti-American feeling ran high among the refugees, especially the soldiers.

Many times I was asked, "Are you an American?"

"No," I said, "I'm English."

"Americans no good," was the inevitable reply. "Americans number ten."

Field of 'learning disabilities' becoming the 'in' thing

One of the "in" fields today in education is the field of learning disabilities.

There is hardly a parent with a child in the primary grades, at least in relatively affluent areas, who has not heard of the problem. If a child is hard to manage, he is "hyperactive" and needs drugs. If a child has trouble learning to read he has "dyslexia" and needs special help. And if a child is clumsy and slow to learn motor skills, he's just a plain victim of "minimal brain dysfunction."

Those diagnoses are made nearly every day by friends, neighbors and teachers and often send worried parents scurrying off to their pediatrician, neurologist or psychologist for extensive testing.

In addition, as shown by The Herald last week, the specter of learning disabilities has been enough to mobilize the Illinois General Assembly into appropriating more than $1 million in three years for research on a mass test that could be given to every child in the state in order to detect potential learning disabilities.

A LOT OF questions now are being raised about that mass screening test and about the company, Computer Psychometric Affiliates Inc., which has been developing it. State officials have now asked whether it's proper for the state to finance a test that a private company will sell, whether the company is capable of developing the test and whether what the firm says it is going to determine about children is valuable.

All those questions belong in the essentially political sphere. But there are other questions that experts in the field of learning disabilities are starting to ask themselves which have a bearing on the whole general subject. Last week, I heard one of those experts raise those questions.

by Wandalyn Rice

Dr. Sylvia Richardson was a teacher before she became a pediatrician and she has been a pioneer in the field of learning disabilities. Last week she spoke at the annual dinner meeting for the Council on Understanding Learning Disabilities (COULD), a Northwest suburban group active in the field.

THE IMPRESSIVE thing about Dr. Richardson is that she is a person who knows enough about her field to avoid sweeping generalities, and she made some interesting points about the problems facing the people who are concerned about children with learning problems.

She began by saying that 20 years ago she had a hard time convincing anyone that learning disabilities existed at all. Now, however, she said she is trying "to convince people that all children don't have learning disabilities."

She said she and many other people believe that it is important to recognize and help children with problems early. However, she added an important complication. "I worry about and fear the self-fulfilling prophecy," she said. "We can pretty much produce in a child what we expect to find. If we plant a seed of doubt in a parent's mind, and that's very easy to do, many times there can be real trouble."

The problem, she said, is "a general state of ignorance" among professionals about what learning disabilities are. Everyone agrees that children with learning disabilities display certain symptoms — problems with language, coordination, and perception — but no one is entirely sure whether the problems are due to defects in the child's nervous system, slow but normal development or the fact that some people simply see the world differently than others.

AS A RESULT, Dr. Richardson said, "There is not a parent, there is not a physician, there is not a psychologist and there is not an educator who can separate the child who is merely delayed in development from the one who is defective. We will never know how many children are living out self-fulfilling prophecy."

The solution, as Dr. Richardson sees it, is to change the way schools work with children — not to change the children so they can get along in school. She calls for improved teacher training, for a variety of teaching styles and for increased flexibility to "mix and match" teaching styles to children.

The problem with much of the present system, she said, is that labeling children as "learning disabled" puts the "onus on the child" for not being "right" or ready for school.

"Before we will change our own ways, we will modify the child with drugs or other things," she said. "Until we learn to look at the mismatch between children and schools, I don't think we have the right to keep labeling children as having learning disabilities who don't have them."

Those are strong words — and words that throw even more question on any plan, whether good or bad, to institute "mass screening" for children with learning disabilities.

Dr. Sylvia Richardson

Writers predict Sox, Cubs for last; Dodgers take title

It's late September. Thanks to Oakland owner Charley Finley's mismanagement (losing Catfish Hunter), his team is struggling, trying to fight off Texas in the American League West.

Meanwhile, New York is still contending in the AL East thanks to Finley's costly mistake. The Yankees are slugging it out with Baltimore.

Over in the National League, Los Angeles is enjoying autumn. The Dodgers locked up their division title early. But it's a donnybrook in the Eastern Division with three teams contending. The final week of the season sees youthful Philadelphia outlast Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Early October finds the Dodgers and A's winning their league playoffs, setting up another All-California World Series. Only this time the Dodgers win.

At least that's how the annual sports staff poll sees it.

Last year we were half right. Our mistake was matching up Oakland and Pittsburgh with the Pirates winning the championship.

Our predictions on how the Cubs would finish in their division was perfect — dead last.

The Sox spoiled our percentage. We tabbed them for second, but the South Siders ended up fourth.

This time around the majority of us see both teams on the bottom. Only one pollster was foolish enough to think the Cubs could beat out Montreal — me!

However, I'm not alone when it comes to making stupid predictions. Jim Cook thinks the Sox will finish fourth! (What does an outdoor editor know?)

Paul Logan

Associate Sports Editor

Sports Editor Bob Frisk and myself weren't so optimistic. We figure the best the Sox can do is fifth.

As far as choosing the best team in baseball, three of us — Art Muggallan, Frisk and myself — like Los Angeles (And we're right.) Charlie Dickinson and Klein believe it's going to be Texas. (But you expect the youngest staff members to make immature decisions.)

Cook thinks the Yankees will go all the way. (Hey, Jim. Stick with fishing, boating and camping!) Finally, Keith Reinhard has Oakland winning its fourth straight. (Without Hunter? No way!)

This staff was also asked to name those who figured to win individual honors this season. Although we had just one right last year (Dick Allen with the most homers), this was how the majority sees it in each league:

American League — Rod Carew in batting, Reggie Jackson in RBIs, Jeff Burroughs in homers, Bobby Bonds for MVP, Fergie Jenkins for Cy Young, Bill Virdon or Frank Robinson for top manager and Carlton Fisk for comeback player.

National League — Pete Rose or Ralph Garr in batting, Johnny Bench in RBIs, Bench or Willie Stargell in homers, Jim Wynn for MVP, Don Sutton for Cy Young, Danny Ozark for top manager and Tom Seaver for comeback player.

Finally, see if you agree with my assessments of the divisional finishers. (I'm not responsible for some of the comments.)

AMERICAN LEAGUE EAST
1. New York — Catfish and Bobby mean bonded success.
2. Baltimore — Lee May bring them a title or O's foes won't doze.
3. Boston — Lobster crew's overdue.
4. Milwaukee — Bad hopes make for bitter year.
5. Cleveland — Tribe will flop, frankly.
6. Detroit — Toothless Tigers chasing their tails or fans will demand rebates.

AMERICAN LEAGUE WEST
1. Oakland — The hunter's now the hunted.

2. Texas — How's your Bibby?
3. Kansas City — A mighty KC at the bat, but too much uncola to take the royal crown.
4. Minnesota — Twins won't thaw out in time.
5. WHITE SOX — Pale Hose nearly invisible or they'll miss their Allen wrench.
6. California — Only a miracle can help these angels.

NATIONAL LEAGUE EAST

1. Philadelphia — Now that the cracks have been patched, the Phillies' bell will toll for the division.
2. St. Louis — Lou Brock can't steal a pennant.
3. Pittsburgh — Pirates won't have a Blast-4 this year.
4. New York — No. 2 team in town again.

5. CUBS — They'll shine in '80 . . . maybe or Cubs don't need night baseball to be anonymous.
6. Montreal — The best major league team in Canada.

NATIONAL LEAGUE WEST

1. Los Angeles — Stars will provide Hollywood finish.
2. Cincinnati — Reds need more than Bench strength.
3. Houston — Astros on another aborted mission.
4. San Francisco — Giants more like midgets.
5. Atlanta — Barren without Aaron.
6. San Diego — Padres play like Madres.

Carew, Twins are happy again

NEW YORK — Rod Carew likes to get things straight.

He's not pouting. Everything's patched up between him and Minnesota Twins' boss, Calvin Griffith, the man who pays him. The bitterness, most of it, anyway, is gone.

It's true, there had been some coolness at the arbitration table where Rod Carew, the first American Leaguer since Ty Cobb to win three straight batting titles, argued for a $140,000 contract, but lost and had to settle for a $120,000 one.

The ball club made the point that even though Carew's .364 batting average was the highest in the league, both leagues, in fact, his RBI output of 55 was rather anemic, and then by way of rubbing some salt crystals into the wound, the Twins said they had to go back more than a quarter century to find another second baseman with the club who made as many errors as Carew did last year. Somewhat dryly and quite accurately, Carew replied, they had to go back farther than that to find another player with them who hit as well as he has.

Rod Carew gave the general impression after he lost his arbitration case the Twins did not appreciate him. When the press asked him specifically how he felt, he said unhappy and there was no question about it, he was.

More than a month has gone by and Carew has had ample time to look back and reflect upon how he actually felt then, and how he feels now.

"They said I was disgraced," he says, talking about the way he was characterized after arbitration. "Everybody is disappointed if he doesn't win something. Nobody likes to lose. I'm trying to make a living like anybody else. I got letters about so many people being laid off. Some day I'm going to be laid off, too. You should've seen some of the letters. My wife said, 'Honey, you can't let it bother you. We've been through this before.'"

Rod Carew and his wife, Marilyn, have an inter-racial marriage that is working beautifully. Her reference to the letters has to do with some other mail, much more vicious, he got from bigots when he was first married.

Anyway, Rod Carew is a lot happier now.

He'll be happier yet to learn Calvin Griffith truly does appreciate his ability — regardless of what happened at the arbitration table.

"You have to appreciate him," says the Twins' board chairman and president. "He has been an All-Star eight years; he has won the batting title three years in a row, he's a helluva ballplayer."

"I'll tell you how much I appreciate Rod Carew. Sam Melo wanted to send him back to Charlotte eight years ago, but I told Sam to play him because I thought he was a big league ballplayer. I've only dictated to a manager in the case of three ballplayers — Bob Allison, Harmon Killebrew and Carew — and all three turned out to be All-Stars. That's not so bad, is it?"

The big difficulty with so many employer-employee relationships, in baseball as well as in so many other businesses, is that frequently one side can't see the other side's point of view and vice versa. Worse yet, neither side tries to.

Calvin Griffith, I've always found, is more candid than most other big league operators. Sometimes, he's even too candid. This time is no exception.

"I have to look out for Calvin Griffith, too," he says in the face of repeated charges that economy is the key to the way he always operates. "I lost a half million dollars last year; two million in the past four years. Our ticket department did a comprehensive survey and showed we had only 30 good days to play baseball last year."

"Okay, Carew was upset because he didn't get what he asked for — $140,000. We offered him $125,000 but he wanted to arbitrate and ended up with $120,000. He beat himself out of $5,000. Still, he isn't making a bad salary. I'd like to get what he's getting. I don't make that much."

"I'll tell you this about Rod Carew: He can be as good as anybody in baseball if he wants to be. He's got the speed, he can handle the bat, he's got the glove. All he has to do is knock in some more runs. Did you know he drove in seven less runs last year than the year before? When you offer a guy a $25,000 raise, that's still a pretty good raise."

Final touches added to Plae Dae

The Mount Prospect Jaycees are putting the final touches on their Plae Dae, an indoor track meet for the trainable mentally handicapped children, ages 10 to 21.

The event is being held at John Hersey High School on Saturday, April 5 at noon. The public is invited to attend.

The Jaycees have arranged to have students of three member schools of the North West Suburban Special Athletic Association participate in Plae Dae. The schools are Kirk, Malloy, and Stradford.

People need to feel important and successful in at least one or two major areas of living. The mentally retarded face constant experiences of failure and frustration. Sport provides an ideal setting for the development of the total person. In other words the retarded must think, move, and feel in relation to others around him and, at the same time, actually completely enjoy what he is doing. He accomplishes a sense of importance and success because of his contribution along with his fellow team members. He also achieves a real feeling of "membership" in something in which all people engage.

The Mount Prospect Jaycees hope Plae Dae will accomplish this psychological feeling for those who will compete on Saturday.

Howard "Hopalong" Cassidy, a former football star, put it well: "Retarded children realize a tremendous value from sports. They can learn to get along, to accept each others faults and shortcomings. They learn to take bruises and ups and downs. Sports is the best medium I know of for the retarded youngsters to learn about competition and to practice for the competition of life."

Bartow lands UCLA post

GENE BARTOW

UCLA athletic director J. D. Morgan, in announcing the selection of Gene Bartow as the new Bruin head basketball coach, Wednesday described the former Illinois and Memphis State coach as "a proven teacher of the sport of basketball."

Bartow steps into the shoes of retiring John Wooden, who propelled the Bruins to 10 NCAA championships in 12 years, coaching them to a total of 620 victories in his 27 years at the Westwood campus.

"We are pleased to welcome Gene Bartow as our new head coach and are looking forward to his continuing the great heritage of UCLA basketball," Morgan said in his announcement.

"I regard Gene Bartow as one of the nation's outstanding coaches who is a fine proven teacher of the sport of basketball," the Bruin athletic director said.

Bartow, 44, has a 14-year college coaching record of 229 wins and 140 losses.

During the 1971-72 season at Memphis State, Bartow was the unanimous choice as coach of the year in the Missouri Valley conference and won a bid to the national invitational tournament in New York City off his 21-7 record.

The following year he was selected as coach of the year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and took his Memphis State Tigers all the way to the finals of the NCAA championships before losing to the Bruins 87-66 at St. Louis, Mo.

Bartow reportedly was disenchanted with his position at Illinois because of an NCAA punishment for recruiting violations committed while Harv Schmidt, his predecessor, was in command. The school has been limited to just three basketball scholarships for each of the next two seasons, a penalty Bartow did not learn about until he left Memphis State to take the job.

His Illinois finished with a disappointing 8-18 record this season and in a tie for last place in the Big Ten.

Detroit win ousts Bucks

Bob Lanier scored 26 points playing on a tortuously sore left knee Wednesday night to put the Detroit Pistons into the playoffs of the National Basketball Association with a 97-89 win over the division leading Chicago Bulls.

The Pistons' win eliminated defending NBA runnerup Milwaukee and assured Detroit of a second straight playoff appearance for the first time in 12 years. The Bucks will finish last in the Midwest Division.

Two scoring bursts enabled Detroit to build up a 14-point lead, 69-55, after three quarters and the Pistons held on in the final period to clinch a first round playoff berth against Seattle.

Bulls center Nate Thurmond played sporadically because of a bout with the flu and Jerry Sloan, who scored just two points, became ill at halftime and did not play again.

Tom Boerwinkle and Norm Van Lier led Chicago with 17 points each.

A junior high league that works

(Ed. Note: The Mid-Suburban Junior High Athletic Conference offers an excellent example of what can be done for the youngsters at that level. Dick Saylor, public relations director at Cooper Junior High in Buffalo Grove, examines the conference in this special story for The Herald.)

by DICK SAYLOR

For many years, junior high athletics in the northwest suburbs was generally restricted to boys basketball. It was a high caliber brand of ball coached by men whose talents were equal to their high school counterparts, but whose interest lay in the teaching of fundamentals and the development of the younger player.

As a natural outgrowth of competitive interscholastic basketball, athletic leagues developed to promote competition and to facilitate scheduling. Of ten school districts merged to form a league of convenient size, six or eight teams. Games with non-league teams were included to lengthen schedules.

Occasionally a conference would branch out into other sports. Track and field and wrestling began to emerge, but it was basketball that was emphasized and which attracted the greatest numbers for tryouts. Only recently, within the past five years, have a relatively small number of athletic leagues developed a year-round program of interscholastic athletics for boys. Even more rare is the conference which provides equal opportunities for girls.

In the northwest suburbs the Mid-Suburban Junior High Athletic Conference offers an excellent example of balanced and competitive programs.

The Mid-Suburban includes Dist. 21 schools (Cooper, Holmes, and London) as well as River Trails of Mount Prospect, MacArthur of Prospect Heights, and St. Peter Lutheran School of Arlington Heights. Competition began with boys' basketball but now includes league wide schedules in boys and girls cross country, girls basketball, boys wrestling, girls volleyball, and both boys and girls track and field.

A superintendents board of control oversees the workings of the league since four separate districts are involved. In turn, a principals board of control sets policy and is responsible for the construction and enforcement of the league constitution.

The constitution sets down rules for all sports including length of season, number of games, who may participate, and general conduct of coaches employed by member schools.

This constitution is of major importance and is the strength of the conference. Administration of the league is in the hands of superintendents and principals who can see that no one sport is over-emphasized and that girls sports receive equal status with boys. Athletic leagues which do not have such a document are often run by coaches who see sports from a biased viewpoint and who have strong vested interests.

Nearby districts now suffering with the problem of implementing girls sports into a program top-heavy with boys activities could use the constitution as a model. In this, its first year in use, it has already undergone some needed revision, yet its foundations are strong. Students in the newer sports programs now experience the same high degree of skill-development and intensity of competition as has been enjoyed by basketball.

A great deal of a school's "pride" comes from its degree of success in competition against other schools. In Dist. 21 for example, competition is provided through many channels: concert band and choral contests, solo and ensemble competition, jazz band contests, drill team competition, chess tournaments and science fairs.

A measure of a league's success and a source of its overall pride is how its schools fair outside the conference. Two notable examples of the Mid-Suburban strength have occurred this year.

Four conference schools participated in the 12-team Hadley Jr. High Invitational Cross Country Meet, held at Newton Park in Glen Ellyn.

Seventh grade results found Cooper, MacArthur, and River Trails finishing first, second, and third with Holmes in sixth place. Twelve of the first twenty individuals were from the Mid-Suburban.

In the eighth grade MacArthur and Holmes were first and second with River Trails fourth and Cooper sixth. The first five individuals were Mid-Suburban runners as were 15 of the first twenty.

The three Dist. 21 schools from the conference entered the Illinois Kids Wrestling Programs Sectional Meet held at Maine North High School. Fifteen teams were entered, some from as far away as South Stickney. Boys participated in 16 weight classes with two wrestlers from each class advancing to the state finals in DeKalb. Of the 32 state qualifiers, Holmes sent six, London four, and Cooper one. Holmes finished second in overall team standings, London tied for third and Cooper was sixth.

Perhaps the most important provision in the Mid-Suburban Junior High School Constitution is for an annual trophy to be awarded to the school whose teams, coaches, and student body display the highest quality of sportsmanship for the year.

Cards' netmen open with win

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Tennis Editor

"I was interested in seeing how the people I need to win all year would look," said Arlington tennis coach Tom Pitchford. "I think we looked pretty good for a first meet."

The Cardinals, looking pretty good to their coach, must have looked awesome to the Sterling squad they pounded 12-0 Tuesday.

Arlington took eight singles matches and four doubles to open their season in impressive fashion. No. 1 singles player Paul Wei unloaded on Dave Beeler 6-1, 6-3 while Luke Weeg took the No. 2 singles match and John Yeazel the No. 3.

Pitchford, commenting on Yeazel's 2-6, 6-1, 7-6 decision over John Benson, said "I'm glad Yeazel had a three setter. He hadn't played in ten days and he needed the work."

BISON BOW TO LAKE PARK

It was a different story for the Buffalo Grove Bison tennis team as they slipped in their opening effort of the season to Lake Park, 4-1.

The Bison of coach Don Biere picked up their lone point in the No. 2 doubles match when George Bastable and Mike Ursin turned back Randy Geiske and Dan Hildebrandt 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

EAST OVER NORTH IN MAINE BATTLE

Maine East used a pair of singles match triumphs to post a 3-2 victory over cross-town rival Maine North in the season opener for both schools Wednesday.

East's Norm Peterson, at No. 1 singles, and Jim Harkensee at No. 2 put the Demons on top 2-0. The first doubles team of Bob Kosberg and Carl Aschacher put the clincher on Maine North with a 6-4, 6-3 win over Mitch Goodman and Dean Toriumi.

Work-retraining plan payments not taxable

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Ask the IRS

I participate in a work-retraining program sponsored by the state welfare agency where I live. Are the payments I receive in this program taxable?

No. Such payments are not taxable (exclusive of extra allowances for transportation, etc.) provided they do not exceed the public welfare benefits you might be receiving otherwise.

I am receiving taxable unemployment benefits from which tax has not been withheld. Should I file a Declaration of Estimated Tax for 1975?

You must file a declaration of estimated income tax, Form 1040-ES, if your estimated tax (line 11 of the estimated tax worksheet) is $100 or more and your estimated gross income for 1975 includes more than $500 in income not subject to withholding. Other circumstances of marital status and amount of gross income affect whether you must file Form 1040-ES. For further information call the IRS toll free with the number listed in the tax forms package you received in the mail.

I use my car in my work and have to travel over toll roads to reach some of my clients. Are these tolls deductible in part or in full?

If you are required to use your car in your work, you may deduct the business portion of its operating costs. These deductible costs include tolls incurred during business use of your car.

Can I deduct my transportation expenses for going to military reserve meetings once a month?

If the reserve (or National Guard) meetings are held in the general area of your tax home (the city or general area in which your business or other employment is located) and you return home on Saturday night, the transportation cost from your home to the meeting is a commuting expense and is not deductible. If the meetings are held outside the general area of your tax home, you may deduct the cost of your transportation to attend the meetings. If the reserve meetings are held after work on a normal workday, you may deduct the cost of getting from your work to the meeting. However, if for some personal reason you do not go directly from one location to the other, you may deduct only the amount it would have cost you to go directly from work to the meeting.

Water-damage studies coming—boon or boondoggle?

by LEA TONKIN

Additional urban water damage studies may be a boon or a boondoggle for Chicago area residents in flood-prone regions, depending on your perspective. As the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers opens a proposed study of the urban water damage in the Chicago-South End of Lake Michigan area, there is divided opinion about the need for study of areas already covered by government surveys.

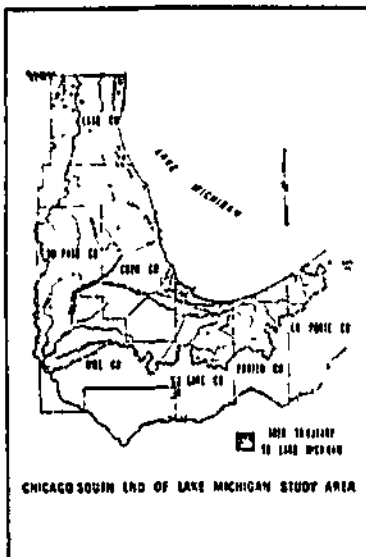

The Corps held a public meeting March 11 in Chicago to explain its study of a 2,600-square-mile area that covers portions of Cook, Lake, DuPage and Will counties in Illinois and three counties in Indiana. The area lies within the drainage area of the Des Plaines River and its tributaries and the area that is tributary to Lake Michigan.

As explained by Carl Hessel of the planning department for the Corps' Chicago District office, the agency will consider means of solving water damage problems in the area. Initial funding for fiscal year 1976 is set at $192,000 and the entire project may cost $4.5 million, more or less.

"THERE CERTAINLY is a need for this study," said Hessel. He cited the increased development in the Northwest suburbs and throughout the Chicago metropolitan area that has contributed to flooding problems. The DuPage River basin is a priority study area for the project, he said.

The only catch in this worthy project is that much of the study area outlined by the Corps has already been studied or will be surveyed shortly as part of the Chicago Metropolitan Area River Basin Plan. The project was started in 1971 as a joint effort by the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

The study, slated for completion in 1976, will cost more than $3 million. It covers several creeks and rivers in the Northwest suburbs. These include the Des Plaines River, Poplar Creek and Salt Creek in addition to the North Branch of the Chicago River, the Little Calumet River and other areas. The SCS study and the Army Corps of Engineers study are aimed at finding solutions to the perennial flooding problems in many Chicago area communities.

Hessel said existing studies will be considered and that duplication of effort will be avoided. The value of the Corps' study is also hailed by the MSD's supervising engineer for flood control, Frank Kudrna, who said the Corps' information will complement previous study results in a comprehensive area plan.

LEE BOTTS, an officer of the Lake Michigan Federation in Chicago questions the need to burden taxpayers with duplicate studies of flooding problems. "I'm not convinced that the present members of Congress, local agencies, the state of Illinois or regional planning agencies have gotten together and said these problems should be solved by the Corps of Engineers," she said.

The Corps' historical emphasis on structural control such as the construction of locks and other projects, may lead to an avoidance of land-use control recommendations, she said, calling for public criticism of the proposed study.

The criticism is seconded by Ann Fisher, Arlington Heights, conservation chairman for the Great Lakes Chapter of the Sierra Club. She said the proposed Corps study is a "make-work project for the Chicago District office" and a boondoggle paid for by taxpayers. Corps reliance on traditional flood control plans as channelization and dam construction could affect the recreational use of the Des Plaines River, she said.

Seek breeder reactor opinion

Public comment on the liquid metal fast-breeder reactor program must be submitted to the federal government by April 9. Calling for public criticism of the project, the Palatine based Pollution and Environmental Problems group says the project is as uneconomical as it is unenvironmental. The General Accounting Office has reported that the breeder program will cost at least $10 billion and take until the 1990's to complete.

It was originally planned for completion by 1985 at a cost of $2 billion. Potential safety problems and the generation of large quantities of plutonium are criticized by the group. Comments may be sent to: W. H. Pennington, Assessment and Coordination Director, Division of Biomedical and Environmental Research, U. S. ERDA, Washington, D.C. 20545.

Nuclear power plant blocked

The Tuesday decision by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals to halt construction of the Bally nuclear power plant near Gary is a victory for environmental groups that have opposed the plan. Potential safety problems and public health considerations were considered by the court, in addition to potential damage to Cowles Bog at nearby Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore.

The court said the Atomic Energy Commission violated its own regulations in issuing a construction permit for the plant, and ordered Indiana Public Service Co. to fill in the excavation at the plant site.

Wife's consent needed

I have been looking at the new 1975 automobiles and would like to trade for a new one. However, the old car is in both my name and my wife's name, and she's in favor of spending the money on things for the house. Can I go ahead and trade anyway?

No. While joint ownership of property has its advantages, you are learning of one of its disadvantages. Where property is held jointly, all owners must consent to its sale.

Win at bridge

Duplicate play is different

A rubber bridge player would waste no time with today's hand. He would be delighted with his club slam. After drawing trumps he would concede a diamond trick and go on to the next rubber after scoring 1,370 points.

A duplicate player would not risk his slam, but would undoubtedly give himself a chance to score an overtrick that would be worth an extra match point or two.

He would rise with the ace of spades at trick one. Then he would draw trumps with three leads while leaving the five spot in dummy and the six and four in his own hand.

Then he would lead his jack of hearts. If East ducked he would rise with dummy's ace, lead a diamond and give up on seven tricks. But if East covered South would score his extra trick.

He would start Operation Extra Trick by running spades so as to discard one diamond. Then he would overtake dummy's five of trumps with his six, cash his last trump and discard dummy's diamond.

West would have been squeezed with his ace of diamonds and long hearts; and South would have scored the extra 20 points.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Flying OK for stroke victim

I hope you can help me with an important problem that I have. Last year on my way to work I had a stroke. This left me with a bad left leg and arm.

I was told the stroke was due to my very high blood pressure, and I have been under a doctor's care ever since. I'm responding very well and have had more or less normal pressure for the past several months.

It's important that I go to California and the plane trip is five and a half hours. I've consulted three doctors and have been given different opinions by each.

One tells me that it is bad for me to take such a long trip. Another tells me it is okay if I stretch my legs every half hour since the plane is pressurized.

I just don't know what to do so I hope you will please give me your opinion. I'm 65.

If you are capable of enduring a 5½-hour bus ride, you can make a 5½-hour airplane flight. The sitting is more of a problem than the altitude.

The doctor who told you the cabin was pressurized was right on that score. Commercial aircraft maintain an altitude below 7,000 feet. When you are sitting still that is not enough stress to cause any significant problems for you and most of the time the cabin pressure is much lower than 7,000 feet, commonly below 5,000 feet.

If you drove over the mountains or rode in a bus you would be exposed to higher altitudes. To avoid the dangers of prolonged sitting you need to stretch and move around, which I would also advise on a long bus or auto trip. Rarely prolonged sitting causes pressure on the leg veins and may cause clots to form.

The other big problem is at the air terminal in handling baggage and hurrying to make planes. If you don't get excited and let someone else do the work for you, it is not much of a strain.

Are there any outward obvious signs of rectal cancer? How often should one be checked for rectal cancer?

Blood from the rectum is often the first sign. That is why you shouldn't assume that blood means hemorrhoids. Sometimes hemorrhoids pop out because of the pressure of a tumor above the hemorrhoids.

Difficulty in having a bowel movement usually doesn't occur until the cancer has advanced. A sudden change in bowel habit for no apparent reason, though can be a sign of tumor of the colon and deserves immediate attention.

Weight loss usually means the cancer has progressed, and it can be caused by cancer originating from any source.

The silent way a cancer of the rectum can start is a good reason for a regular checkup and in adults that should include at least a manual rectal examination. Most cancers of the rectum are within reach of the examining finger.

Portable device

Continuous-injection anti-cancer drug studied

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — In an effort to reduce the inconvenience and cost of days-long anti-cancer drug infusions, a Texas medical team is testing a device that allows a patient to do almost anything while the drug is flowing into his veins.

Such continuous intravenous drug administration improves the effectiveness of some chemicals designed to kill cancer cells and has been shown to prolong the lives of some leukemia patients.

Dr. Emil J. Freireich, of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute of Houston, said in a weekend report to an American Cancer Society seminar that intravenous infusions of anti-cancer agents have been carried out continuously for up to 60 days with good results.

SUCH THERAPY, however, normally requires hospitalization with its attendant high costs.

To avoid this, Freireich said his center has been using a newly developed drug tank and pumping apparatus about the size of a beer can which straps onto the arm of a patient. Once the tube is inserted into a vein at a hospital or doctor's office, Freireich said the patient can go home, go to work or even play tennis.

When the supply of the drug runs low in the device, the patient merely replaces it with a fresh cartridge without interrupting the flow of the drug.

The device was developed by the Alza Corp., Palo Alto, Calif., and is not yet commercially available. When it is, Freireich said it probably would cost $200 for a five-day infusion — less than the cost of a five-day hospital bill.

He said the technique also could be used for other medical purposes, including the delivery of antibiotics to patients when continuous levels of the drug would work better than intermittent injections.

About joint tenancy

I am a widow and have two sons. Can I put my house and real estate in joint tenancy with my two sons?

A joint tenancy can be formed by any number of persons and they need not be related to each other. But property cannot be sold without agreement of all parties in joint tenancy. When one of the joint owners dies, an inheritance tax may have to be paid, depending on the value of the property. There are some pitfalls to joint ownership and it would be wise to consult an attorney.

Children's Memorial seeking former patients

The Children's Memorial Hospital, Chicago is seeking former patients who received x-ray treatment at the hospital in the 1940s and early 1950s for childhood head, neck and upper chest problems.

Although medically accepted treatment at that time, there is now evidence that patients who received this treatment could have developed thyroid abnormalities.

Children's Memorial, a pediatric hospital, recommends that these former patients see their own physician, or the hospital will refer former patients who received the x-ray therapy at the hospital to a McGaw Medical Center facility, for a free examination by a physician and further indicated tests.

Persons who have reason to believe they were given the x-ray treatment at Children's Memorial should phone the hospital, 649-4023 to verify that fact and for information on how to arrange an appointment for an examination.

High inventories make it a buyer's market

'Get top value for your home dollar'

by LEA TONKIN

Learn how to get the most value for your housing dollar, says Arlington Heights builder Edward Zale. As president of the Home Builders Assn. of Chicago, Zale said first home buyers and people who are house-hunting for the first time in years should keep several points in mind.

The moods of the housing industry will affect the home buyer's ability to obtain financing, the interest rate on a mortgage loan and availability of living units in your price range, Zale said.

The stimulus of government-backed financing and interest rates that dropped to the annual 7 1/2 per cent range should be considered, he said, adding that

Edward Zale

"There is a very real possibility that interest rates will go up by fall because of the Treasury borrowing."

HOME SEEKERS should expect to get good value for their money as builders unload high inventories of new homes, Zale said. "Builders are now offering more for your money, as in the sale of condominium units," he said. The likely increases in construction costs during 1975 should be considered, he said.

The tax break offered in the bill signed last week by President Ford may be another incentive for new home buyers. The 5 per cent tax credit up to a maximum $2,000 is offered to buyers of new inventoried housing units.

The "back-to-basics" trend in the housing industry also widens the selection of available units for cost-conscious buyers, Zale continued. "Builders are cutting down on amenities to cut costs," he said. Expensive clubhouses, air-conditioning and landscaping are among the extras that may be eliminated as a means of paring home costs. The lot size and square footage in the living unit may be reduced in some cases.

ENERGY-CONSERVATION items offer a savings to buyers that will become an increasingly competitive feature, Zale said. "It makes sense to cut back on energy loss," he said. Buyers should check whether a home includes storm windows and screens, extra insulation and other features that will cut energy consumption, and whether average projected figures for heating bills are available for the unit.

Comparison shopping is important to the home buyer. Zale said the next step after the price range and general location have been decided is to "look at every housing development in your price range. Compare value. The first thing is location, which is subjective. The next is square footage." Then the buyer can compare features such as number of bedrooms, and whether the house has a basement, garage, storm windows and screens and other features.

The big question is whether potential buyers will take advantage of the deals offered by builders and sellers, Zale said. Despite government statistics that indicate a low rate of housing starts, "There have been definite signs of a turnaround," he said of Chicago area sales. "This is true in all price ranges." Zale believes that recent sales increases in the Chicago area indicate an upturn in the economy within six to nine months and a boom year for housing in 1976.

Price rise likely to offset lower interest

If you've been waiting for interest rates to drop further before you go ahead with a home purchase, you should look at government figures on housing costs. That's the advice of Arlington Heights builder Edward Zale, president of the Home Builders Assn. of Chicago.

U.S. Dept. of Commerce statistics indicate new single-family home prices rose 9 per cent during 1974 over 1973 prices. The $3,200 average price hike brought the average price tag up to $33,700 for a new home.

The average sales price of a new home increased during 10 of the past 11 years, the government figures show. For example, during the past five years the average price increased 39.6 per cent from $26,600 in 1970 to $33,700 in 1974.

The costs of labor, land and building materials will likely increase during the coming year, Zale said. Consumers will have to weigh the increase against any expected drop in mortgage interest rates.

Buyer optimism important part of housing market: expert

There's more to the housing market than the lender's ability to make home loans, an area finance expert says.

James Fitzmaurice, senior vice president of First Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago, said in the association's current newsletter that consumer optimism also is essential to an improved market.

Fitzmaurice said savings and loan associations have experienced a substantial flow of savings inflows since early December. The easing of mortgage terms that resulted from the savings increase will alleviate some of the pent-up demand for housing that's accumulated within the past 16 months, he said.

"It is commonly believed that home buyer confidence and an eventual revival in the housing industry have become interdependent upon those factors important to the tone of the economy as a whole," he said. "Thus, a prerequisite to any improvement is a restoration of public confidence in the economy." Stable money market conditions, moderation in interest rates and a state usury limit that does not hamper lending ability also are essential, he said.

First Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago, which has a Mount Prospect branch office, reported in its monthly survey of existing residential property sales in Cook County that volume continued a downward trend during January. The dollar volume reached $17,261,500 on 469 sales during the month.

The figure is 47.8 per cent lower than the $33,089,500 sales reported in December, 1974. Sales during December were the lowest for any month in the period 1970 to 1974. The January sales volume was down $60,507,500 or 77.8 per cent from the $77,769,000 a year earlier, and the number of sales dropped 79.2 per cent from 2,256 sales recorded a year earlier.

Revive your kitchen area

More and more, kitchens are becoming the focal point of family life and friendly get-togethers. This room should be cozy, comfortable, and attractive — a special room where people feel welcome!

Here are a few suggestions from the National Paint and Coatings Association on how to get rid of a stereo typed, humdrum, kitchen-y atmosphere and replace it with fresh new ideas.

Large kitchens are ideal subjects for a decorating make-over. Try to let your imagination take over and incorporate into the kitchen pieces of furniture and decorating ideas which are normally kept out of this "work" area. For instance, a discarded bedroom dresser can be sanded and painted an earth-rust color. Then, secure a butcher block and place it on the top for use as a giant-size cutting board. As a bonus, the drawers can hold handy kitchen utensils and dish cloths!

Walls are great canvasses in any room. Utilize this massive space in your kitchen by painting on bright designs. Why not make them kitchen-oriented — bright fruits and vegetables? Before beginning, clean the wall surface well by removing all grease and dust. Then apply a background coat of a neutral toned enamel. Enamels are recommended for kitchen painting because their glossy surface allows for easy clean-ups. Let the surface dry thoroughly before beginning your artwork. Choose colorful paints for applying the decorative design. When this coat dries, finish with a clear coating.

Make an original and inexpensive dining table by using a large size telephone wire spool. Sand it well, dust off any residue which remains, and apply a wood filler to close the pores. Then stain it a rich mahogany. Use as many coats as you like, allowing adequate drying time between each. Protect and shine the stained surface with a durable clear finish.

Another idea for a make-shift table is to obtain an object which will function as a base for a cut round of plexi-glass or a sheet of plywood. A large storage chest set upright, or an old coal stove (pot-belly style) are good choices for a base. Paint them a bright yellow or fiery red before placing the surface sheet on top. To finish the plywood sheet, sand it, stain it, and then finish with a clear coating. If the wood is very porous, a wood filler may be necessary. If you're looking for a little more color, choose a bright enamel as the final coat instead of a stain. Before application of the finish coat, however, apply a wood prime coat.

Create office with paint

Everyone should have his own "special" work area at home — even someone who's on a tight budget. Here are a few ideas from the National Paint and Coatings Association on how to create an attractive "office" in that tiny bit of wasted space.

First, choose a secluded corner area and paint one of the walls in a bright contrast color. Use a flat wall paint. Next, construct a functional, colorful desk. Choose two 3-drawer units made of plywood and paint them in a two-toned color scheme. Then, for the desk top, lay a sanded and varnished door over the units!

Hanging shelf units create an added decorative touch. Easy to install, these shelves snap into metal wall slats in a jiffy. Before hanging, paint them with a shiny high gloss enamel. Store books, plants and memorabilia on these handy shelves. A giant section of burnt cork can also be hung on the wall to serve as a bulletin board.

Choose an off-beat type of chair (one that you normally wouldn't find in a conventional office area, such as wicker) and spray paint it to match the painted door units which are supporting the door (i.e., desk!).

Now you're all set to untangle the family checking account, in a more relaxed, cheery atmosphere!

Lack of spending plan a waste of funds

"What kind of a spending plan do you use in your family?" When I pose that question to classes or discussion groups, I hear a variety of answers. Attendees at classes admit they need a personal or family money plan. But they also admit doing nothing about setting one up. Why? I encounter the same puzzle in counseling couples. Most of the excuses fit into one or more of the following patterns:

• "I don't like rules when I spend my money!" Possibly neither husband or wife would state their position quite so bluntly, but their short-sighted philosophy leaks through. With no limits or goals, neither husband or wife can fall short.

Suppose a couple decides to spend $60 a month for clothing. writes that amount in a book, and keeps track of clothing expenditures. Then, if a wife or husband spends $80 to $100 for clothing, she or he is open to criticism for overspending. But without a plan or commitment, neither must answer the charge from the other — "You overspent!"

In business, a sales quota, manpower headcount limit, or operating budget is part of many jobs. A man or woman wants no part of similar performance accounting at home. Neither husband or wife wants to face the hassle of justifying their spending. These couples look only at the negatives associated with a spending plan — the bother, nagging, nagging thoughts of coming up short, and of explaining impulsive spending decisions. Both miss the potential benefits. They look at the hole, not the doughnut. A spending plan affords positive, goal-oriented motivation to get what each want separately and together.

• "Keeping records takes too much time." Organizations of all kinds devote substantial efforts to accounting, making sure income balances out and assuring cash in the bank for payroll. No company would consider trying to operate without adequate bookkeeping. The government wouldn't let it try. Yet every family represents a small business. A family operating without an accounting system founders as hopelessly as any small business without records; only the government's discipline is lacking.

"Taking too much time" needs to be related to earning a family's income, at least 50 hours a week for most breadwinners. Spending 15 to 30 minutes a week could hardly be considered excessive effort when compared to the solid and countable benefits to be achieved from a practical spending plan and record system.

• "Worrying about money and where we spend it takes the fun out of living!" Spenders who enjoy the impulsive pleasure of spending with little thought usually end up with a staggering debt load. Unplanned impulsive spending may appear to release the joie de vivre, but such pleasures seldom last long. Rather than blowing cash, impulse spenders live on credit and waste $1 out of every $5.50 to $9 for the doubtful privilege of paying later.

Planning how and where to spend money has been considered as a dull, unprofitable, totally negative operation. Just talking about spending money often leads to a knock-down-drag-out family fight. But, when a couple looks at a spending plan positively as a system for generating cash for doing those things previously considered beyond their means, they achieve their own special brand of joie de vivre.

• "When the money is gone, it's gone! Why bother trying to figure it out?" Such a throw-in-the-sponge attitude leads to hopelessness and a quiet desperation that robs many families of things and activities they could easily afford. A key goal of a spending plan is to reduce spending on unimportant but necessary items in order to increase cash available for fun. Fun includes a long list of alternatives, activities we like doing.

• "I don't really want to know where my money goes. It's too depressing!" Even such an honest answer gains few hurrahs. Those who "don't want to know" have given up without ever coming to grips with the key problem — control.

Homes for Living network increases volume in 1974

Edward J. Busse, president of Annen & Busse, Inc. Realtors, reports that the Homes for Living Network, of which Annen & Busse is the exclusive affiliate member, within the MAP Multiple Listing Service area, culminated 1974 with a substantial increase in the number of families it assisted being transferred, and in total dollar volume of referral business generated between Homes for Living Network members.

The Homes for Living Network, with national headquarters in St. Louis, Mo., is a national marketing network of Realtors comprised of more than 1,000 real estate offices in all 50 states and Puerto Rico. Through numerous programs and services, Homes for Living Network members serve the vital needs of American home buyers and sellers.

The number of relocating families being referred between HFL members increased 20 per cent in 1974, amounting to over $32 million in referral sales documented by members. With approximately 40 per cent of the 1,000 HFL offices actually reporting referral statistics to HFL Headquarters, it was estimated that total sales generated was in excess of $120 million.

"Having affiliated HFL members in more than 8,000 communities means that Annen & Busse can facilitate transferring families' needs by directly contacting HFL members in other cities. At the same time with roughly one-fourth of transferes today moving across state lines, we continually assist persons moving to the northwest suburbs through HFL members in other cities assisting families moving to our area," Mr. Busse said.

Loudness, noise differ

Loudness — the decibel level of sound — can be measured by a machine. But a machine is not attached to a thinking, feeling brain. The human ear is. Your mind makes a distinction between "loud" and "noisy," according to recent research, says the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

Researchers have found that the "noisiness" of a loud sound can increase with time. If a loud, noisy sound lasts more than one second — without becoming louder — it is perceived as noisier by subjects of psychological experiments.

Another important difference between loudness and noisiness is the quality of the sound, ARI adds.

When a sound-rating program was set up for outdoor air-conditioning units, ARI explained, technical experts quickly realized that a simple decibel reading would not work. Some sounds produced by the units were low in volume but irritating.

The sound-rating program was consequently designed to take "noisiness" into account as well as loudness. As a result, many manufacturers of air conditioners have taken steps to control whines, screeches and vibration sounds produced by their products, regardless of their sound level.

Check your heating outlets

Does this ever happen in your house? The thermostat indicates that it's warm enough, but you still feel chilly and uncomfortable. If so, maybe your heating outlets may be located in the wrong place, suggests the National Better Heating-Cooling Council.

Although comfort is a subjective feeling and may vary from person to person, there are certain criteria which are accepted as standards. For instance, people are most comfortable when there is a minimum difference in temperature between the floor and the ceiling.

Tests conducted at the University of Illinois demonstrate that hydronic baseboard heating panels, when installed on all outside walls, especially under windows, are particularly effective in reducing temperature differences between floors and ceilings. There is a uniformity of warmth throughout the room, and the baseboard panels act as a barrier against the cold drafts when they are installed on the perimeter of the house.

Another important comfort tip: locate all thermostats away from direct contact with heat, cold and sunlight. This permits them to record only the temperature in the room and nothing else.

WHAT CAN YOU FIX FROM A THRIFTY MIX?

The question might well be. What can't you fix? Many of the baked items included in the family menu have simple ingredients in common. In a few minutes and for a nominal cost, you can make your own mixes. Blend flour, baking powder, shortening, salt, quick or old-fashioned oats and nonfat dry milk for Basic Baking Mix. You may want to reserve a permanent place for it on the kitchen staples shelf.

Basic Baking Mix wins acceptance by well-organized cooks who hunt shortcuts and still can call their creations "homemade."

BASIC BAKING MIX

- |                                 |  |
|---------------------------------|--|
| 8 cups sifted all-purpose flour | 1 1/2 cups instant nonfat dry milk           |
| 1/2 cup baking powder           | 3 cups quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked |
| 2 tablespoons salt              |  |
| 1/2 cup shortening salt         |  |

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt into very large bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in dry milk and oats. Store mixture in an air-tight container in a cool dry place until ready to use. Makes about 14 cups.

BEST BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

- |                             |  |
|-----------------------------|--|

| 1/2 cup sugar               | 1/2 cup fresh frozen or canned blueberries, thawed and drained |
| 1/2 cup water               |  |

Combine all ingredients, stir until just blended. (Do not overbeat.) Fill greased muffin cups 2/3 full. Bake in preheated 400 degree oven about 20 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

SPICE SHELF CAKE

- | Cake:                             | Topping:                                  |

| 1 cup granulated sugar            | 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar         |
| 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar | 2 tablespoons evaporated milk             |
| 1 teaspoon cinnamon               | 1/2 cup flaked or shredded coconut        |

For frosting, combine all ingredients. Spread evenly over cake. Broil until frosting becomes bubbly about 1 minute. Serve warm. Makes 9 servings.

Place meatballs on center of pastry squares, dampen edges. Bring corners of pastry up over meatballs, pinch edges together to seal. Brush with beaten egg. LAST MINUTE FUSS is minimal for Linda Ferro's buffet dinners. Her favorite recipes, such as Emince de Porc A la Brook, are elegant yet can be prepared in advance leaving her free to socialize with her guests.

Always a hit with guests

Emince de Porc elegant party fare

by LOIS SEILER

For a sit-down dinner or buffet, Emince de Porc A la Brook is elegant party fare. A favorite recipe of Linda Ferro, Arlington Heights, this dish easily adapts itself to any fashion of serving and is always a success with the guests.

When Linda plans this entree for a dinner menu, she precedes it with two intriguing appetizers. One is called Party Shrimp Pot, which combines such tasty ingredients as artichoke hearts, broiled and skinned green pepper chunks, mushrooms and shrimp in a nippy marinade. Chilled for several hours, the marinade is drained off and the shrimp and vegetables served with party forks or toothpicks.

An appealing Cheese Fondue complements the shrimp and vegetables. Linda's is made with a dry white wine and Swiss Cheese flavored with Kirsch, nutmeg and seasonings. Bread cubes are used for dipping.

HER EMINCE de Porc is given in proportions for 12, but easily adapts to smaller or larger quantities. The dish consists of small strips of pork tenderloin coated with flour, browned and then simmered with onions and mushrooms in vermouth and cream. Lemon juice, olives and capers add a bit of tang.

This versatile mixture may be spooned into a noodle or rice ring or served from a chafing dish. Linda garnishes it with parsley and paprika. She prefers using Uncle Ben's Converted Rice, cooking it in bouillon for better flavor. The pork dish is a hostess' delight: It is economical to prepare and can be made a day ahead.

As accompaniments Linda suggests a vegetable casserole and spinach salad. The Ferros grow their own vegetables organically and supplement this by purchasing bushels of vegetables at farm stands. Linda's husband, Don, helps her freeze and can all the produce, which keeps their family adequately supplied during the winter months.

For the vegetable casserole, Linda uses her own frozen beans and canned tomatoes, baking them in bouillon seasoned with oregano, garlic powder and Parmesan cheese. Delicious yet easy to prepare, the vegetable dish is a little soupy and must be served with a slotted spoon.

FRESH SPINACH is coated with vinegar and tabasco for an appetizing salad at the Ferro home. It is combined with celery, onion and chopped eggs, and tossed with a creamy cheese-flavored mayonnaise dressing. The slightly bitey flavor complements the dinner.

When serving a large crowd, Linda prefers a tray of finger foods to complete the meal. Her dessert assortment includes tiny moist brownies, pecan nut cups, kolacky and little cheese squares.

Made in muffin tins, the nut cups resemble miniature pecan pies. They have a butter, flour and cream cheese crust with a rich pecan filling, and can be made ahead and frozen. The nut cups always make a big hit with guests.

Because most of this meal can be made in advance, there's no last minute fuss for Linda. She need only toss the salad before serving the hot food, and has the freedom to enjoy her guests.

Don enjoys helping Linda prepare for

Controversy over country ham labels still brewing

by EDWARD ROBY

It doesn't take a gourmet to recognize the dry, salty and pungent flavor of country ham. But now meat packers and small farmers are feuding over exactly what it takes to make the Southern delicacy.

The feud began five years ago when North Carolina producers asked the U.S. Agriculture Department (USDA) to set criteria for using the coveted country ham label.

With the exception of Virginia's Smithfield Ham — made by four firms under patents protected by both Virginia and federal law — there are no country ham standards other than taste and appearance.

SOME FARMERS age hams up to a year, using secret formulas dating back to colonial days when Indians taught early settlers to preserve ham. Others contend modern methods can cut the curing time drastically.

"They're trying to get them down to a 60 to 70-day ham," said Robert Pulley of Ivor in Tidewater Virginia. "It's cheaper and it won't shrink as much. It's not a quality product. You just don't have that good pungent taste to it."

"It's not so much the USDA, but the big boys in the meat packing business," said Pulley, whose family has made country hams for three generations.

The USDA proposed standards in 1970 and 1972 but withdrew them. Small farmers in Virginia and North Carolina disagreed on standards and also accused large packers of wanting to sacrifice quality for profit. The USDA Meat and Poultry Inspection Division said it was caught in the middle.

"THE DEPARTMENT is not interested in publishing a standard that shows favoritism toward any one group or locale," said USDA spokesman Bill Dennis. "At this stage, we don't know when we will put out a new proposal."

Robert Oliver, president of the Virginia

Meat Packers Association, said North Carolinians want a minimum 60 day cure while some Virginians want 55 days and others want to simply require that the hams have certain characteristics.

"If someone is able to come with the same finished product in less time by using advanced technology, as long as it has all the characteristics — like dry texture, density and salt content — they should be allowed to take advantage of it," said Oliver, an executive with a large meat packer.

It. F. KELLEY, a Virginia Tech swine specialist, has fears that big packers will "use the country ham label when in fact it's not really a country ham."

"They will simulate it, try to control the temperature and heating. They are going to make these things more like artificial products. I can take a country ham and hang it up and that thing might be good for three, four, five, six months."

"If I did that with a faster cured ham, you'd have problems," he said.

Surry ham packer Wallace Edwards doubts the USDA can devise satisfactory standards but adds, "Most everyone agrees country ham should be shelf-stable — that is, it doesn't require refrigeration."

"THERE'S A significant difference in the flavor between one that's 12 months old and one that is considerably less. The consumers know what they like."

Herb Jones, an Isle of Wight county extension agent, believes the USDA should not try to set country ham criteria.

"The pioneers in this country were raised on this type of home cooking," Jones said. "For someone to come along and say this is all wrong would be an injustice."

"The one thing that made the country ham and the Smithfield Ham so significant is all the tender, loving care that went into it."

PARTY SHRIMP POT

- 1 9-ounce can water-packed artichoke hearts, rinsed and drained
- 1 lemon
- 1 1/2 pounds cooked shrimp
- 2 green peppers
- 1 can mushroom crowns, drained (or 1/2 pound or more fresh mushrooms, parboiled)
- 1/2 cup salad oil
- 3 tablespoons wine vinegar
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 scallion or green onion, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Pepper

Gently squeeze each artichoke heart and place upside down on platter. If hearts are large, cut in half lengthwise. Sprinkle with juice from half a lemon and let stand at least one hour. Drain shrimp and toss with juice of remaining lemon. Cover and refrigerate.

Wash and dry peppers. Place in foil-lined broiler pan and broil about three inches from high heat for about 10 minutes, turning several times until skin is blackened. Watch carefully to prevent burning. Remove and let stand until cool enough to handle. Peel off skin. Cut off stem ends, cut in half. Remove seeds and cut in large squares.

Drain lemon juice from artichoke hearts and shrimp. Place in a large container with green pepper squares and mushrooms.

In a small bowl, beat together all remaining ingredients, using a generous amount of pepper. Pour over vegetables and shrimp, cover and let stand in refrigerator eight hours. Drain and serve with party forks or toothpicks. Yield: 1 1/2 quart appetizers.

CHEESE FONDUE

- 1/2 clove garlic
- 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/2 cup Kirsch
- 2 cups dry white wine

- 1 1/2 pounds natural Swiss cheese, grated
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- Dash of nutmeg
- Dash of paprika
- Dash of white pepper

Rub inside of fondue pot well with garlic. Discard. Mix cornstarch with Kirsch and set aside.

Pour wine into fondue pot and heat until bubbles start to rise to surface. Add cheese by thirds, stirring constantly, until all is melted. When mixture starts to bubble, quickly add cornstarch mixture, stirring constantly until thickened.

Reduce heat; add baking soda and spices, mixing well. Serve with bread cubes.

EMINCE DE PORC A LA BROOK

- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup coarsely-chopped onion
- 1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 4 pounds port tenderloin
- Salt, pepper and paprika to taste
- Flour
- 1 cup dry vermouth
- 1 1/2 cups heavy cream
- Juice of 2 lemons (4 tablespoons)
- 20 pimiento-stuffed olives, sliced
- 2 tablespoons capers

Melt butter in skillet; add onions and mushrooms and saute until golden. Remove from skillet.

Cut port into one-inch strips on the diagonal. Season with salt, pepper and paprika, coat with flour and brown quickly in skillet. After port is browned, return vegetables to skillet. Lower heat to simmer; add wine. (This much can be done a day ahead.)

Warm cream and stir into meat mixture. (If above is made ahead, stir in cold cream.) Cover skillet and simmer over low heat 25 minutes. Remove cover; add lemon juice, olives and capers. Turn into serving dish, chafing dish or rice ring. Garnish with paprika and parsley. Serves 12. Serve with rice cooked in bouillon.

Kitchen items top future bride's list

If you are a bride-to-be planning a new kitchen, here is a list of kitchen utensils you will use almost every day: a set of measuring spoons, set of measuring cups for both dry and liquid ingredients, set of mixing bowls, flour sifter and strainer.

Don't forget knives for paring, slicing, utility and bread. Include a rotary beater, wooden spoon and long-handled fork on your list. Spatula, pancake turner, slotted spoon, ladle, tongs and potato masher will all come in handy.

Also on the must list are chopping board, funnel, graters, colander, pastry brush, minute timer, potato peeler, can opener, bottle opener and corkscrew.

STOCK UP on saucepans with covers in 1, 2 and 3-quart sizes and baking dishes or covered casseroles in 1 and 2-quart sizes. A double boiler, a heavy skillet or frying pan with cover, a roasting pan with a rack, cake pans in round, square and tubular styles, pie pans, baking sheets, coffee maker, toaster and a salad mold will also help make preparation easier for the new homemaker.

It's important to keep these necessary items in mind when signing up at the registries or giving shower suggestions. The basics are often forgotten when choosing extras such as crystal and silver. But these are the practical gifts for the bride-to-be. A perfect idea for a shower gift is a clothes basket or waste basket filled with little trinkets that are needed in the kitchen. After all, who needs four silver pickle forks?

Crystal ball

Agricultural researchers have developed a device to measure the firmness of fruits and vegetables without squeezing them.

The experimental machine uses sound waves to sort produce for ripeness and internal defects. It permits sorting of fresh fruits and vegetables as they ripen in storage and helps eliminate spoilage.

GIRL SCOUTS Wendy Hart, Mary Kimlinger and Dawn Cary concoct a new dish using mint thins as a base. Area Girl Scouts will begin delivering the five varieties of cookies April 5.

Some fancy desserts made from Girl Scout cookies

It's just about spring and that means the Girl Scouts will be knocking on your door to deliver those cookies you ordered last month.

All five varieties — butter cookies, sandwiches, peanut butter roundups, cookie mints and fudge creme patties are good by themselves, but here are a few ways to use them in making other treats.

GIRL SCOUT CRUMB COOKIES

6 eggs
1½ cup granulated sugar
1½ teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons butter-flavored vanilla Girl Scout Cookies, ground and packed in a cup
½ cup walnuts, ground

Separate eggs. Beat egg whites until stiff and beat in ½ cup sugar. Fold egg yolks into egg whites. Fold crumbs to which baking powder has been added. Add nuts. Drop by teaspoonsful on greased cookie sheet. Bake at 325 degrees until lightly browned and test done. Melt 1 package chocolate bits and 1 package butterscotch bits. Spread on cooled cookies.

GOODIE BARS

In a 9x13-inch cake pan melt 1 stick butter. Crush enough butter vanilla cookies to equal 1½ cups. Sprinkle over butter. Add in layers 1 small can walnuts broken (1 cup), 1 small package chocolate chips, 1 can Southern style coconut (about 1½ cups). Then pour over 1 can Eagle Brand milk. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Cool 10 minutes. Then cut into bars. Makes about 36 bars.

FRUIT SALAD PIE

1½ cups butter vanilla cookies or peanut butter roundups, crushed
¼ cup margarine, melted
1 cup sliced bananas
1 cup pineapple chunks, drained
1 cup diced peaches, drained
½ cup maraschino cherries, halved and drained
½ cup miniature marshmallows
1 cup frozen whipped topping, thawed
¼ cup crumbled butter vanilla or peanut butter roundup cookies

Combine first two ingredients and press into bottom and sides of 9-inch pie pan. In large bowl combine all but last ingredient. Pour into pie shell. Sprinkle top with remaining cookie crumbs. Chill until serving time. Serves 6 to 8.

CHOCOLATE MINT COOKIE BANANA SPLIT

Place ½ of a banana in a split glass. Add 1 scoop chocolate mint ice cream, 1 scoop chocolate chip ice cream and 1 scoop Zanzibar chocolate ice cream. Drizzle with chocolate sauce, top with whipped cream and sprinkle with nuts. Decorate with 2 whole Girl Scout cookie mints and maraschino cherries

Take advantage of meat buys

To take advantage of the best buys at the meat counter, keep in mind that the economy of a cut depends on the amount of cooked lean meat it provides as well as its price per pound.

The best buys at the meat counter tend to be hamburger, beef liver, chicken, turkey and frozen ocean perch. Most expensive selections are loin steaks and chops of beef, pork, lamb and veal.

If you are trying to cut food costs, replace expensive meats with less expensive cuts or with meat alternatives such as eggs, dry beans, peanut butter and cheese. These foods are suitable replacements for meat because they also provide protein, B vitamins and minerals for which meat poultry and fish are valued nutritionally.

A 3-OUNCE serving of cooked lean meat provides at least 20 grams of protein — one third of the recommended daily allowance for a 20-year-old man. However, larger amounts of some meats are needed to provide the same amount of protein; for example, 10 slices of bacon, a half pound of sausage, three and a half frankfurters or six 1-ounce slices of bologna. Since a single serving is generally not large, the amount of protein provided is obviously less than that of a 3-ounce serving of cooked lean meat.

When you consider prices on the basis of buying protein, amounts of bacon and bologna that provide 20 grams of protein cost more than amounts of rib roast or beef or round steak that provide equal protein.

The best buys among meat alternatives are dry beans, peanut butter, canned bean soup and eggs. However, the amounts of those foods needed to provide 20 grams of protein are larger than the usual serving. You would need a cup of cooked beans, a can of bean soup, 4½ tablespoons of peanut butter, three ounces of American process cheese or three eggs to provide 20 grams of protein.

Storage tips for Bacon

Buy only enough bacon for one week. For peak aroma and flavor, use bacon within five to seven days after purchase. Store bacon in its original wrapper in the refrigerator. Bacon slices separate easily if package is removed from the refrigerator about five to ten minutes before using. Bacon may be frozen for short periods of time, but for best flavor, freezing is not recommended.

Inexpensive casserole to serve party of eight

Searching for an unusually good but inexpensive casserole which will serve eight people generously? Try this combination of ground beef, cheese and spaghetti.

Start with 1½ pounds of lean ground beef. In a large skillet melt a generous tablespoon of margarine or butter and cook the beef, separating with a fork, until red leaves the meat. Next, add 21 ounces tomato sauce (can size varies), 1 teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon pepper. Stir well, then remove from heat.

In a large mixing bowl put an 8-ounce package of softened cream cheese, 1 cup cottage cheese and ½ cup sour cream. Beat until well blended, then add ½ cup thinly sliced green onions, including some of the tops, and a generous tablespoon of finely chopped green pepper.

MEANTIME, cook 8 ounces of thin spaghetti according to package directions. Drain well in a colander. Lightly butter a 2-quart casserole or baking dish. Spread one-half the spaghetti in the bottom and top with the cheese mixture. Spread over the remaining spaghetti and drizzle with 2 tablespoons melted butter. Now cover with the meat sauce and sprinkle with grated parmesan cheese to your taste. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes.

Mostly for men

by Charles Flynn

To accompany the casserole we made this unusual Persian Peach Salad. Combine 1 cup canned peach juice with ½ cup vinegar, ½ cup sugar, 12 small whole cloves, and 3 small sticks cinnamon. Bring to a boil and add 1 cup canned sliced peaches. Simmer for 10 minutes.

Strain syrup from peaches, reserving the syrup. Remove cloves and cinnamon mon. Add to the syrup enough water to make 2 cups liquid and dissolve in this a package of orange gelatin. Chill the gelatin mixture until slightly thickened, then add the drained peaches. Pour into a flat glass dish and chill until firm.

Serve on lettuce leaves with a dab of mayonnaise. Will serve the eight for whom you prepared the casserole.

Avocado crop nearly double

The current California avocado crop is 188 million pounds, nearly double the crop of last year and the largest in the history of the industry. Due to extensive new plantings, the crop will be larger with each succeeding year.

What does this mean to Midwest consumers? It means that avocados will now be available in greater volume here. The exotic fruit may be eaten in varying stages of ripeness, so they store easily. The current plant craze has also provided a shot in the arm for the business with people discovering the lush, green fruit that can be raised by planting the pits.

To some people, the avocado is an exotic fruit, but it is an everyday item in the tropics where an avocado tree is as common in the backyard as an oak or maple is here.

The name "avocado" goes back directly to an Aztec word for the fruit "ahuacatl." When the Spanish conquerors came, they took over both the fruit and the name which they couldn't pronounce.

Our word "avocado" is a phonetic attempt to say the Aztec word though it seems much more soft and suave, almost like the buttery soft texture of the fruit.

A REDWOOD DECK is designed to be a natural extension of the house — almost an outdoor room. Because it's not only attractive but weather-resistant and easily maintained, redwood is a natural choice. For this deck, knotty garden grade was used to keep down costs while providing a comfortable, rustic look.

A redwood deck affords casual outdoor living

A redwood deck may be just the project you've been looking for this year to pump new excitement into your home and make your stay-at-home family vacations more pleasurable. And by choosing the lower cost garden grades of redwood and doing some or all of the work yourself, chances are you can keep the cost within even a 1975 budget.

A redwood deck is one of the most rewarding of home improvements — providing comfortable outdoor living space and the opportunity for a new, more casual lifestyle. And a deck addition has the almost magical ability to give your home an instant resort flavor while at the same time adding real value.

Right now is the time to begin planning your deck project, to take advantage of the energy and ambition you've stored up over a long winter, and so the deck can be completed in time for a summer of stylish outdoor living.

REDWOOD IS THE natural choice for decks, not only because it is such an attractive wood, but also in light of its unsurpassed weatherability and ease of maintenance.

Happily, the most economical grades of redwood are the ones recommended for decks and nearly all outdoor projects. These grades, often called "garden redwood," contain knots and streaks of cream-colored sapwood which lend an attractive, rustic look to outdoor home improvements. Best of all, the garden grades will cost you far less than the clear architectural grades of redwood. And because of redwood's relative freedom from warping, shrinking and swelling, your deck will serve you and your family for years and years to come. Alternate wet and dry conditions, which can quickly "do in" other woods, have little, if any, effect on redwood.

At your lumberyard or home center, garden redwood will be sold under three grade designations — construction heart, construction common and merchantable.

CONSTRUCTION HEART is milled solely from the familiar reddish-brown redwood heartwood, which has an unsurpassed natural resistance to insects and decay. For that reason this grade is usually reserved for members in or near the ground where that special durability comes into play.

Construction common, which is quite a bit lower in cost than construction heart, contains streaks of cream-colored redwood sapwood. Although the sapwood is as durable as other whitewoods, it doesn't have the decay resistance of redwood heartwood — so only construction heart should be used for posts and other members which touch the ground and for supporting members within six inches of the ground. The sapwood streaks in construction common are particularly attractive in contrast with the cinnamon color of the heartwood, and this economical grade is an excellent choice for the decking itself and for other off-the-ground portions of the deck.

Merchantable redwood, lowest in cost of the three garden grades, contains larger knots than construction heart and construction common. But by trimming unsound knots out of merchantable boards, you have an economical source of very useful shorter lengths.

REMEMBER THAT it's always best to check in advance with your lumber dealer to make sure the redwood grades and sizes you want will be on hand when you're ready to begin your project. Long term supplies of redwood are being assured by a careful forest management program where as much redwood is planted and grown as is harvested. Redwood has a leg up in this regard because it's one of the world's fastest growing trees.

A new full-color booklet, "Redwood Decks Do It" is an excellent source of deck ideas and suggestions on how to get started on your deck project. The booklet contains photographs of a wide range of deck designs along with hints on how to select, work with and finish the garden grades of redwood. It's available for 50 cents from Dept. N, California Redwood Assn., 617 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Calif. 94111.

BEFORE. COMPACT front yard was pleasant enough but not particularly attractive or inviting. Single step up to the front door made for an awkward transition between house and yard. (See transformation below.)

ECONOMICAL GARDEN grade redwood with its knots and streaks of cream-colored sapwood gives attractive yet informal look to this deck. Benches frame the deck and serve as both tables and seats.

AFTER. REDWOOD DECK built from lower cost garden grades turns this yard into a comfortable outdoor living area. Benches and wide steps provide plenty of built-in seating. Garden grade redwood with its streaks of cream-colored sapwood lends an attractive informal look to this deck.

A sweet solution to our economic woes

Attention, President Ford: I have figured out an airtight solution to our economic problems!

Actually, it is so simple I'm surprised you didn't think of it yourself. That is probably because you live in Washington, where this solution wouldn't be as obvious. Come to think of it, it's even more a wonder that somebody like Sen. Kennedy didn't think of it, being from New England.

Anyway, the idea came to me while I was visiting my family in Ohio over Easter. (I probably wouldn't have thought of the solution myself here in Chicago.) You had just delivered your address to the nation announcing that you would sign the tax bill.

My family, like millions of others, had gathered around the TV to listen to the announcement, and afterward we indulged ourselves in a bit of instant analysis. The general consensus was that the rebate is a drop in the bucket — no one is going to rush out and buy cars or major appliances with $30 to $200.

THUS, THE ECONOMY will not be significantly stimulated. The recession will continue, and with it, high rates of unemployment.

Moreover, the line you drew on your budget deficit chart, Mr. President, is already a pipedream, since these increased government benefits and reduced revenues have set the stage for further inflation down the road.

The mention of inflation in our family circle set off another of those familiar rounds of "Do you know how much I paid for..." By this time I was weary of the discussion and had begun to browse the local newspaper.

A story about the Geauga County Maple Syrup Festival caught my attention. This was always a favorite event during my childhood. Every March my family would visit one of the small northeastern Ohio towns to take part in the time-honored traditions associated with the annual running of the sap.

IN THE OLD town square, sheds housed huge cauldrons for boiling the sap down into maple syrup. We would file past the smoky, bubbling kettles, hearing once again the story of how the sap progresses from tree to table, and then we would go to the local firehouse where the townspeople served up all the pancakes and sausage you could eat — all drenched in pure maple syrup!

I mentioned the maple syrup festival to my family, and that touched off a discussion of the price of pure maple syrup these days. My father said that the sweet sticky delicacy now costs a whopping $12 a gallon! Nearly worth its weight in gold, I thought to myself in astonishment.

That's when the idea hit me: Why not sell maple syrup to the Arabs. At $12 a gallon it's far costlier than oil, and there's no way they could produce it themselves in the Middle East. They would be fully dependent upon us for their maple syrup supply, and the outflow of oil dollars from the Arab states back to the U.S. would far outweigh our continued purchase of Arab oil.

WE COULD EVEN set up a maple syrup cartel with Canada, to gain the kind of economic leverage the Arabs have with their oil cartel.

In no time at all, our international balance of payments problem would be righted thus ending inflation; the production of maple syrup would put thousands of Americans back to work; our economy would be booming!

I guarantee it'll work, Mr. President, or I'll wash my mouth out with maple syrup!

Learn poison agent first

Dear Dorothy: I've been told it's smart to keep syrup of ipecac and activated charcoal on hand when one has children — to use if they eat or drink something poisonous. How does one know which one to use? — Mrs. Marianne Walker

Simply by asking the question you disclose one of the great problems parents face when small children get into dangerous substances or plants. Yes, ipecac and charcoal are good to have on hand, but they are for different situations. Ipecac induces vomiting, and if a child has taken in anything corrosive the vomiting would do double damage with the corrosive matter coming back through the system. In a case like this, charcoal is an antidote.

What one has to do in emergencies like these is to find out what the child has swallowed, then call either doctor or poison control center for advice. It may mean a quick trip to the hospital with the child, taking along the container or, if poisonous plant, a leaf from it.

Dear Dorothy: I've been following the reports about so many having trouble with grease spots on polyester garments. They might try what I do — sprinkle on talcum powder, rub it in, then leave the garment overnight. Next day, brush off the powder and the stain will be gone. This is not for machine-type grease, but for the kind you get being careless at dinner. —Ann Rollins

One of these days soon I'll experiment with your method. For the time being, however, having had one polyester dress ruined by an oxidized grease spot, I'm too cautious to wait overnight. Moment I see such a stain, I sponge it with a soap solution immediately or, if there is time, launder it at once.

Dear Dorothy: To get a chromium appliance sparkling, just use baking soda on a dry cloth. —Mille Constantino.

Want to grow a coco palm?

Over the past eight years of writing this column, I've introduced all manner of offbeat gardening topics, items of interest I thought readers might not find in other area newspapers. Today I've got a real lulu!

I suppose not too many readers are holding their breath waiting for this one, but perhaps, just maybe, someone out there could use today's tidbit — if not today then some day.

If perchance you have a coconut stashed away hoping to grow a big, beautiful palm tree for your living room, help on how to grow it from seed (the coconut is the seed) is hard to find. That's what I learned not long ago when I called the Extension Service. They had no information.

SO I DECIDED to go directly to the source where I got the nuts in the first place — Hawaii. I wrote an acquaintance, a professor of tropical horticulture at the University of Hawaii and an Extension Service specialist there. He is an authority on nuts, which is why he took such a personal interest in me, I guess.

I told him I was having poor luck sprouting coconuts, that I'd tried warm water in a minnow bucket, seawater in a dishpan, damp sand, wet sand, deep sand, shallow sand, black sand, Grow-Lux lights, even a chicken incubator without success.

He replied that he couldn't see why in the world I would have a problem germinating coconuts. (Evidently they have no problem in the Islands!) "Perhaps," he said, "the temperature in your environment doesn't get up to 83 degrees every day."

ACCORDING TO THE Hawaiian plant doctor, it's just a matter of having three to six months' worth of patience, waiting for the big seed to hatch — something akin to the gestation period of an elephant. Since I've been at it only 30 days, I'm incredibly relieved!

Coconuts have been known to float on the ocean for up to 110 days and travel 3,000 miles and still maintain their viability, washing up on some forgotten sand dune and promptly exploding into fronds, without any outside help from over-anxious plant zealots. The plant doctor says coconuts to be grown as ornamental house plants, should be selected on the basis of whether or not the water sloshes around inside when the nut is shaken. Sloshing water means the coconut is viable; no slosh — no good. He says that nuts should be soaked in a pail of water for two to three days before planting. His coconut bulletin says the container used to germinate the coconut should be twice the diameter of the nut.

Potting shed

by Mary B. Good

THE UNHUSKED NUT can be placed on its side to germinate, but a better-shaped plant will result if the nut is placed bottom up (the spot where the coconut was joined to the tree) — that's the pointed end down — so the leaves will emerge from the top. If you have difficulty deciding which end is up, play safe and plant it on its side. Whichever end you choose, the bottom should be covered with a well-drained soil mix and watered frequently. A big pot will be needed — a foot and a half square and a half-foot deep to house the monster after the leaves (hopefully) unfold and the roots (maybe) appear.

If the temperature in your home remains between 70 and 80 degrees plus, you're in business! If not, toss the coconut and try growing a fern instead.

WHILE A COCONUT palm in nature may attain a height of more than 80 feet and live as long as 90 years, don't plan on raising the roof or embarking on other exotic home remodeling jobs. Home-grown coco palm won't grow any higher than five feet or live much longer than five years.

So here I sit sowing pascal celery seeds so small I have to use a tweezer and a magnifying glass to handle them, flanked by a dozen or so seven-pound apiece coconut seeds that are going to give me a hernia if I keep moving them around the igloo.

And the only reason I'm doing this is so that when someone asks me "What's new?" I can tell them we don't take showers anymore because I'm using the shower stall as a hothouse for 413 celery seeds so small I can't see them, and there is a seven-pound coconut in my chicken incubator!

Worst since '67

Record snowfall strands thousands

SNOW SHOVELERS like Loo Bryant of Arlington Heights found it difficult to keep up with the fast-falling snow, which was expected to be foot-deep by morning. But Wednesday's effort put him about 6 inches ahead.

by LYNN ASINOF

The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

- O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 53. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 53 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 458 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC8 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seats.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollett, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 85 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would send in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

Cuts seen to balance school budget

by LINDA PUNCH
River Trails Dist. 26 will have to reduce teaching staff and cut back some educational programs to avoid a deficit budget in 1975-76.

Business Mgr. Ralph Beaudoin told Dist. 26 board members Tuesday night district expenditures will exceed estimated revenues by $400,000 without changes in staffing and program. Pay raises for teachers and money for building improvements were not included in the estimated $3,590,000 budget.

Supt. John Fridlund presented two staffing plans which he said could save the district up to $187,000 by reducing the staff by 15 teachers, increasing class sizes, combining some upper-grade levels and eliminating several programs. The board approved letters of termination for the district's 15 first-year teachers.

ONE PROPOSAL calls for larger class sizes at the upper-elementary level with teacher aides assisting in classrooms with more than 30 students. The second proposal provides for larger class sizes and split classes — the combining of two grade levels in one classroom — in most of the elementary schools.

Fridlund said class sizes at the primary level will remain small but classes of "16 or 17 students aren't economically feasible or educationally desirable at the upper and intermediate levels." He said staffing changes would not affect the quality of education received by the children.

Another economy measure suggested by Fridlund is elimination of the junior high CORE program — a teaching method where a group of students share the same science, math, social studies and language arts teachers. He said the program is more expensive since it involves additional planning and scheduling time for teachers.

Other money-saving measures suggested by the administration include elimination of the program for gifted children, a cutback of the secretarial staff and elimination of the consultant for math and science. Fridlund emphasized the reductions are "basically staffing changes" and said there will be no cutback in educational materials or equipment.

Board members reactions to the proposed cutbacks were mixed, with Theodore Waltenberg saying the district must maintain a balanced budget.

"I don't like red ink — it's never done any good. We've got a problem but I think we should face it," he said.

OTHER BOARD members said they prefer a small deficit in the budget to making major program cutbacks.

"I don't really think a balanced budget is some sort of sacred cow. I would hate to see us sacrifice some excellent programs in the name of a balanced budget," said board member Leora Rosen.

She said the board must look at the long-range trend to make sure the deficit "will be easier to live with each year."

Board member Frank Smith said he wouldn't mind a "reasonable" deficit in the budget. "I don't believe you can live in this community without going in the red," he said.

Board member Lloyd Demel said he would "be willing to accept some nominal deficit but not a substantial amount."

"We have to believe Dr. Fridlund when he says the staffing changes won't take away from the educational programs."

The only way I would vote for a budget and staffing plan is if I'm sure it won't degrade the educational progress," he said.

RICHARD FOSTER and Peggy Golden, candidates for the Dist. 26 board, said they would rather see a deficit budget if programs could be saved.

"I don't think we can provide a good education and maintain a balanced budget. I could almost go with the staffing changes if we don't eliminate some of the programs," Mrs. Golden said.

Foster said his "initial reaction is that a balanced budget is not that important. I would rather see some small deficit this year than see some drastic changes."

Both candidates said they were upset with the dismissal of the 15 first-year teachers, although board members said some of them will be rehired before September.

"We hope that all the teachers who want to return will find a position available. But the only way that will happen is through attrition," Demel said.

Nancy Miller, president of the River Trails Education Assn. (RTEA), said she was upset about the cutbacks "but it wasn't unexpected." She declined further comment until teachers can discuss the staffing changes with the administration.

Fridlund asked the board to delay action on the staffing changes until principals and staff at each school have a chance to make additional recommendations. The board will discuss the proposals at the April 15 board meeting.

Improved intra-city buses urged

The North Suburban Mass Transit District should place emphasis on improving intra-city bus service in Des Plaines, according to members of the city's special transportation committee.

The committee met Wednesday with Rex Wilson, the city's representative to the NORTHRAN board, and Mayor Herbert Behrel to discuss a survey which NORTHRAN has asked each of its members to complete.

In answer to another question on NORTHRAN's list of discussion items, the committee said high priority areas in need of immediate transit service include commercial and industrial areas. Service to the Chicago and North Western Ry. stations also should be given priority, the committee said.

In addition to the survey questions, NORTHRAN asks each member to send it information on land use, zoning, street systems, population, major traffic generators and other census-type information.

Behrel said he would forward all the required information to NORTHRAN today. Wilson said he will contact Lois Levey, NORTHRAN's manager of planning, to set up a meeting between city transportation committee members and Miss Levey to discuss the survey and future bus service in Des Plaines.

WILSON SAID the city should suggest NORTHRAN consider more regular routes and increased frequency as priority items.

The committee said inadequate service to the city's industrial area in the southwest section is one of the worst problems now facing the city's transit system.

Major streets which should have regular bus service include Touhy Avenue, Oakton Street, Wolf Road, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Thacker Road and Mannheim Road, the committee said.

THE SURVEY is designed to help NORTHRAN's planning department determine the needs of each of its member communities and then develop bus routes for both intra and inter-city service.

Contract to be ready Friday

Authentic powwow to mark Bicentennial here

It appears likely that an authentic Indian powwow will be conducted in Des Plaines this summer as part of the city's Bicentennial celebration with final details for the event to be completed by Friday.

David Wolf, chairman of the city's Bicentennial Commission, Wednesday said he is drawing up a contract which will spell out commitments on the part of the city, Maine West High School and the Indians.

Wolf said he hopes to have the contract completed by Friday, meet with City Atty. Charles Hug to review it and have it ready in time to present to the city council for approval Monday. The contract also will be presented to the High School Dist. 207 Board of Education for action.

If the contract is approved by the city and the school board, Wolf said he hopes to arrange a public signing of the document Tuesday.

NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN school officials, members of the Bicentennial Commission and the Mascutin Indian Society, who will participate in the powwow, ended Tuesday after a 3½-hour meeting. Wolf said a tentative agreement was reached with all sides.

Officials at Maine West, where the event will be conducted if agreement is reached, expressed concern when plans for the powwow were first discussed that the ceremonial dance might damage the football turf. Officials also voiced concern over the number of persons the event would draw and whether the high school was an adequate facility for the program.

Wolf said officials asked that other cities and schools which have sponsored such events be contacted to determine what problems they had with it. Every school and city contacted responded that the event was successful and posed few if any problems, Wolf said.

"It's my feeling that we have resolved the concerns of the administration at Maine West and the superintendent's office," Wolf said. "In addition we have obtained documentation from previous powwows on the way they were handled and we have received assurances from the Mascutins on security of the camp site, hours for the performances and the type of Indian interpretive dancing to be part of the project."

THE MASCUTINS conduct an annual powwow or Indian dance competition throughout the country starting from the West coast in May and traveling to the east coast where they conclude their program by late fall.

"I think the meeting Tuesday was an excellent expression of cooperation and willingness to work together on the part of these three entities (the high school, the city and the Indians) to bring to Des Plaines a spectacle that we think will be a tremendously educational and historical documentation of Indian lore," Wolf said.

"I hope this will be an experience that will bring about greater understanding between members of an Indian race and the community," Wolf added.

"If it comes about the people in this community will be treated to a spectacle they've never seen before."

Staged by Golf-Maine residents

Write-in vote almost upsets park board

A group of disgruntled residents from an unincorporated area staged a write-in campaign in the Golf-Maine Park District election and nearly took control of the park board.

The residents, members of the Golf-Maine Gardens Improvement Assn., began the write-in campaign after the park district involuntarily annexed their neighborhood March 6.

One member of the group, Ethel Scharkopf, beat candidates Robert Kaufman and Richard Greenwald. She was the lone write-in challenger to win election.

THREE OTHER write-in candidates lost to incumbent board members by margins of 9 to 22 votes.

Albert Sompolski, president of the homeowners' association, Wednesday said the write-in campaign was organized after their area was annexed.

"They took us into the district against our will; this was not proper," he said.

Sompolski said the homeowners will petition the park board next month to disannex their area from the park district.

In other election results incumbent Park Comr. Charles Stolberg beat write-in candidate Jerome Darwin, 96-74, for a six-year term; Comr. Larry Windling defeated write-in candidate Frank Voght, 87-74, and Comr. Jeffrey Picklin defeated write-in candidate Robert Phillips, 82-72, for two four-year terms.

Mrs. Scharkopf won a two-year term on the park board.

SOMPOLSKI SAID about 75 per cent of the homeowners turned out to vote in the write-in effort.

"This should demonstrate that we do not want to be part of the park district," he said.

Sompolski said the majority of the residents in the area do not want to be part of a park district.

"Many of these people are older and have no real need for a park district and the taxes," he said.

Sompolski said the residents voted down a referendum on joining the park district eight years ago.

Park district returns from 8 precincts in Official results from all eight precincts in the Des Plaines Park District election recorded the following votes for the candidates.

For two six-year terms on the board: Dr. Kermit Smith, 1,575 votes; Thomas Mahon, 1,540; Clayton E. Mott, 977; Gregory Quiniff, 734; James Androff, 392 and Kenneth Ross, 182.

For one two-year term on the board: Dr. Thompson Wright, 1,312 votes; John Borsch, 457; Nick Chiropoulos, 349; Joseph Zalabek, 279, and Faye Froehlich, 190.

A special referendum asking voters to approve a 2 cents per $100 tax levy to support the Maine-Niles Assn. of Recreation for the Handicapped was approved by a vote of 2,105 to 715.

Baseball warmup, registration Saturday

A baseball warmup program and registration for baseball will be sponsored by the Des Plaines Park District Saturday at Maine West High School. The program begins at 12:30 p.m.

Boys aged 8 to 15 may participate in four leagues including major little league, intermediate little league, stars of tomorrow and 4A baseball.

Applications for the program are available at the park district office, 748 Pearson St., or by calling 296-6106.

Worst since '67

Record snowfall strands thousands

by LYNN ASINOF

The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

- O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

Studded snow tires

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 53. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

EVERY AVAILABLE SNOWFLOW in the Northwest suburbs was called out Wednesday to battle heavy snows that fell in record amounts and caused massive traffic jams along all major roads, in the area. Mike Weiner, Wheeling public works employee, attaches the blade to a truck in the midst of the storm, readying it for duty.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 58 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

SNOW SHOVELERS like Leo Bryant of Arlington Heights found it difficult to keep up with the fast-falling snow, which was expected to be foot-deep by morning. But Wednesday's effort put him about 6 inches ahead.

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

Mark one up for trio with same birthday

Statisticians say the odds are one in a billion that Mark Conrad, Mark Marcianti and Mark Horcher would be sitting in the same classroom Wednesday, March 26, celebrating their eighth birthdays.

But it happened last week at St. Mary's School, Buffalo Grove, and the three second graders, who also are best friends, had a fine celebration.

Mark, Mark and Mark — one blond, one redhead and one brunet — don't mind in the least sharing names, birthdays and classes.

"Mark and me have been friends since we were 4 years old because our parents are friends and we live on the same block," said Mark Conrad of his neighbor Mark Marcianti.

"It was really a surprise when Mark came to school and then there were three of us," said Mark Marcianti of Mark Horcher — and you begin to sense the confusion.

THE MARKS ALL, like baseball, they play together during free periods and describe themselves as best buddies.

There is a little friendly competition, however, over who is the oldest. Mark Marcianti declared he was the oldest, born at 9:29 a.m., until Mark Horcher found out he was born at 6:45 a.m. Mark Marcianti suddenly remembered he must have been born at 4:30 a.m. Mark Conrad was content to be youngest.

The boys' teacher, Sister Iola, points to the Mark she wants to keep things straight and insists they use their names and initials on all papers. Mrs. Conrad said having three Marks around hasn't posed any problem. "If they're creating a ruckus I just scream 'Mark' and every-one looks up quietly."

The boys are close but do include other friends in their lives. Mark Conrad talks about the boy down the street who he plays with a lot: "He's about 7 and his name's Mark Ufferman."

WHICH OF THESE three boys is named Mark, was St. Mary's School in Buffalo Grove? All of them. From left, Mark Conrad, Mark Marcianti and Mark Horcher, beat billion to one odds.

It appears likely that an authentic Indian powwow will be conducted in Des Plaines this summer as part of the city's Bicentennial celebration with final details for the event to be completed by Friday.

David Wolf, chairman of the city's Bicentennial Commission, Wednesday said he is drawing up a contract which will spell out commitments on the part of the city, Maine West High School and the Indians.

Wolf said he hopes to have the contract completed by Friday, meet with City Atty. Charles Hug to review it and have it ready in time to present to the city council for approval Monday. The contract also will be presented to the High School Dist. 207 Board of Education for action.

If the contract is approved by the city and the school board, Wolf said he hopes to arrange a public signing of the document Tuesday.

NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN school officials, members of the Bicentennial Commission and the Mascutin Indian Society, who will participate in the powwow, ended Tuesday after a 3½-hour meeting. Wolf said a tentative agreement was reached with all sides.

Officials at Maine West, where the event will be conducted if agreement is reached, expressed concern when plans for the powwow were first discussed that the ceremonial dance might damage the football turf. Officials also voiced concern over the number of persons the event would draw and whether the high school was an adequate facility for the program.

Wolf said officials asked that other cities and schools which have sponsored such events be contacted to determine what problems they had with it. Every school and city contacted responded that the event was successful and posed few if any problems, Wolf said.

"It's my feeling that we have resolved the concerns of the administration at Maine West and the superintendent's office," Wolf said. "In addition we have obtained documentation from previous powwows on the way they were handled and we have received assurances from the Mascutins on security of the camp sites, hours for the performances and the type of Indian interpretive dancing to be part of the project."

THE MASCUTINS conduct an annual powwow or Indian dance competition throughout the country starting from the West coast in May and traveling to the east coast where they conclude their program by late fall.

"I think the meeting Tuesday was an excellent expression of cooperation and willingness to work together on the part of these three entities (the high school, the city and the Indians) to bring to Des Plaines a spectacle that we think will be a tremendously educational and historical documentation of Indian lore," Wolf said.

MSD requests builder put pump in basin

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) has been asked to require a developer to install a pump on one of his Wheeling property sites to ease drainage flow coming from the Buffalo Grove Cambridge subdivision.

Arnold Seaberg, Buffalo Grove village engineer, Wednesday said the village has asked the district to enforce requiring Zale Construction Co., Arlington Heights, to install a pump in a retention basin on its Tahoe Village development.

Seaberg and Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer said the MSD has ruled the system cannot work properly without the pump. But Zale has not installed the device because it was not part of a court order requiring construction of a system to correct drainage problems.

THE SITUATION is part of the long-standing Cambridge subdivision drainage dispute, a controversy that has sparked a series of lawsuits involving the two villages, three developers and some citizens.

Seaberg called the pump installation "the final touch" in completing the drainage system and said residents along University Court in the Buffalo Grove subdivision could experience more frequent flooding problems if some provisions are not made.

University Court is in the southern third of the Dundee Road subdivision.

The court order called for construction of four retention basins in the Wheeling Tahoe Village and Lakeside Village developments. The basins are designed to handle storm runoff from the University court area.

OFFICIALS, however, say their capacity is too small to allow for natural flow, making the pump at the Lakeside Villas basin necessary.

Hamer Wednesday said he had recently received a letter from Zale's attorneys stating the firm did not want to install the pump because it was not part of the original system design authorized by the court decision.

He said Zale will attempt to convince MSD officials that proper drainage can occur without the pump. Otherwise, the village may draw on about $4,000 of Zale's $5,000 performance bond on the developments to put the pump in, Hamer said.

The MSD also is empowered to withhold sanitary permits, that would hold up construction of the firm's Wheeling developments if Zale does not comply, Hamer said.

Zale officials and their attorneys were unavailable for comment Wednesday.

'Ride along' plan gives insight into police action

by TOM VON MALDER

It isn't as glamorous as any of a dozen television shows and, like any other job, there are really dull days. But if you ride along with the Wheeling police, you get a fairly good idea of what suburban police work is like.

One patrolman, accompanied on his shift recently by a Herald reporter, handled only one traffic accident, with a minor injury and one traffic stop with the driver ticketed for going through a red light. Patrolman Lester Aradi, a policeman since May, was courteous, friendly and informative.

A ride-along with the Wheeling police starts off with the policeman checking his and the car's equipment. He explains and demonstrates each piece. Aradi then explained the various radio frequencies and about the best system.

NORMAL PROCEDURE is to divide the village into east and west beats at the Soo Line R.R. tracks, with one car on each side of town. Aradi's assignment was the west beat.

He explained that the only special orders for ride-along patrols are to try to avoid being the first car to respond to an emergency call and to only stop the most flagrant of traffic law violators.

Lt. Thomas Conte said citizen participation in the program has been somewhat of a problem. "It was really slow getting off the ground," Conte said. Most residents are not aware they can ride with the police, he said.

The only requirements for the program are that a rider must be at least 18 years old and sign an insurance waiver. Applications must be made in advance so that a time can be chosen when police have sufficient manpower.

Although serious crime increased 53 per cent last year in Wheeling, most of that crime occurs at night so the daytime patrol is more apt to find traffic violators than burglars.

SOME THINGS can be done during the day, however, to watch for burglaries or thefts. Aradi pointed out two houses in the Colonial Heights subdivision, Elmhurst and Hintz roads, at which the garages were left open and it was evident no one was home. Bikes and other items were left easily accessible to any passing thief. We drove by an hour later to check the garages again and in each case the homeowner had returned and a car was in the still-open garages.

At the Cedar Run development, off Elmhurst Road, Aradi spotted a trailer backed up to a building and out-of-state plates on the car. Aradi marked down a description of the vehicle and the license plate number in case a burglary should be reported later at the address. He also ran a license-plate check, by radio, on the car, learning that it had not been reported stolen. "Probably just someone moving in from out-of-state," Aradi said, "but I would've hated to have ignored it and had a burglary reported there later."

The accident we visited occurred at the entrance gate to Ekco Products Inc., 777 S. Wheeling Rd. A woman in one car was cut on the arm. The fire department paramedics arrived on the scene to attend to the woman.

Shortly afterwards, Aradi obtained the radar speed gun from the police traffic car and showed how the instrument is used to clock speeders.

Finally, at the end of the four-hour ride, Aradi pulled behind the Dundee Road police station to fill the squad car's gas tank for the next shift.

Group to sponsor candidates' night

The Highland Glen Homeowners' Assn. will sponsor a forum Friday night for village board candidates in the April 15 election.

The forum will provide the only opportunity for residents to see all of the village board candidates at the same place on a given night. The forum will be at Field School, 51 St. Armand Ln., Wheeling, starting at 8 p.m.

James Poole, president of the homeowners' group, said the candidates from each of the three parties will be given an opportunity to speak and answer questions from the audience.

The three parties that have slated candidates for the upcoming election are the Wheeling Improvement Party, the Wheeling Representative Party and the Wheeling Community Party.

Poole said after the forum, residents will be given a report on the status of the lawsuit between the builder of Highland Glen and the homeowners. The homeowners have filed suit against the developer, charging that the streets in the subdivision were improperly constructed.

Planners to consider updating master plan

The Wheeling Plan Commission will have a committee meeting tonight on updating the village master plan.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the municipal building, 253 W. Dundee Rd. The current master plan has not been updated since 1965.

The updating of the plan is being done with the help of Thompson A. Dyke, village planner, and Harland Bartholomew and Associates, Northbrook.

The updated plan will take into account future commercial, industrial and residential development, as well as schools, parks, semipublic and open-space land.

Adult craft classes open

Registration for adult craft classes is open to residents in the Indian Trails Library District.

Dorie Anderson will show how to decorate wall boxes at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the library, 830 Jenkins Ct., Wheeling.

Three macrame sessions are scheduled. Sally Simon will teach basic macrame knots at 10 a.m. April 15 and another class at 7:30 p.m., April 17. Participants will be making hanging plant holders in the third macrame class at 10 a.m. April 22.

Mrs. Simon will teach bargello stitches at 10 a.m. April 29. All classes will be at the library.

Persons interested in the classes should sign up at the reference desk at the library.

Worst since '67

Record snowfall strands thousands

by LYNN ASINOF
The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

- O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

Studded snow tires still illegal. Page 7.

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 53. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

EVERY AVAILABLE SNOWPLOW in the Northwest suburbs was called out Wednesday to battle heavy snows that fell in record amounts and caused massive traffic jams along all major roads, in the area. Mike Weiner, Wheeling public works employee, attaches the blade to a truck in the midst of the storm, readying it for duty.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 58 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

SNOW SHOVELERS like Loo Bryant of Arlington Heights found it difficult to keep up with the fast-falling snow, which was expected to be foot-deep by morning. But Wednesday's effort put him about 6 inches ahead.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and now homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 458 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC8 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seats.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollert, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 85 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would send in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

Mark one up for trio with same birthday

Statisticians say the odds are one in a billion that Mark Conrad, Mark Marcianti and Mark Horcher would be sitting in the same classroom Wednesday, March 26, celebrating their eighth birthdays.

But it happened last week at St. Mary's School, Buffalo Grove, and the three second graders, who also are best friends, had a fine celebration.

Mark, Mark and Mark — one blond, one redhead and one brunet — don't mind in the least sharing names, birthdays and classes.

"Mark and me have been friends since we were 4 years old because our parents are friends and we live on the same block," said Mark Conrad of his neighbor Mark Marcianti.

"It was really a surprise when Mark came to school and then there were three of us," said Mark Marcianti of Mark Horcher — and you begin to sense the confusion.

THE MARKS ALL, like baseball, they play together during free periods and describe themselves as best buddies.

There is a little friendly competition, however, over who is the oldest. Mark Marcianti declared he was the oldest, born at 9:29 a.m., until Mark Horcher found out he was born at 6:45 a.m. Mark Marcianti suddenly remembered he must have been born at 4:30 a.m. Mark Conrad was content to be youngest.

The boys' teacher, Sister Iola, points to the Mark she wants to keep things straight and insists they use their names and initials on all papers. Mrs. Conrad said having three Marks around hasn't posed any problem. "If they're creating a ruckus I just scream 'Mark' and every-one looks up quietly."

The boys are close but do include other friends in their lives. Mark Conrad talks about the boy down the street who he plays with a lot: "He's about 7 and his name's Mark Ufferman."

WHICH OF THESE three boys is named Mark, was St. Mary's School in Buffalo Grove? All of them. Horcher, beat billion to one odds. From left, Mark Conrad, Mark Marcianti and Mark

Design would end confusion: Mrs. Clayton

Election ballot revision move nixed

by JOHN MAES

State election officials have rejected an effort by Buffalo Grove Village Clerk Verna Clayton to revise the format of the April 15 municipal election ballot.

Mrs. Clayton said Wednesday she was told by state election board officials the village would have to adhere to the code in laying out the ballot despite her attempts to suggest an alternate design.

The ballot has been criticized by independent candidates as confusing and giving an advantage to incumbent Village Pres. Gary Armstrong's Best Government Party (BGP) slate.

Mrs. Clayton said her alternate design would have eliminated confusion by placing the parenthetical expression "vote for one" and "vote for three" in only one location in the middle of the ballot rather than over every set of candidates' names.

THE PRESENT format of the ballot, independents said, could mislead voters into thinking two village presidents and eight trustees are to be elected and may cause many spoiled ballots. One president, a clerk and three trustees are to be elected April 15, but the parenthetical list "vote for one" and "vote for three" over each set of names could mislead the voters, some candidates said.

In addition, the ballot was further criticized as giving an advantage to Armstrong's party because the slate and independent candidates are listed under separate headings.

Although the parenthetical expression is optional, Mrs. Clayton said it must be placed the way it appears on the ballot if used to "aid the voter," she said. The election code also specifies independents and party candidates be listed in separate columns.

"And it goes back to day one," said Mrs. Clayton, saying similar questions about the ballot have been raised in every previous Buffalo Grove election.

TO MINIMIZE confusion at the polls this year, Mrs. Clayton said election judges will inform voters that they are to mark their ballots for only one president, one clerk and three trustees. In addition, signs conveying the same message will be posted at the polls.

Mrs. Clayton said she is hopeful a current study of state election statutes would call for revisions governing ballot format to eliminate confusion in future elections. Mrs. Clayton is running unopposed for village clerk on the BGP ticket.

PAT MARTIN got a surprise when she woke to find a birthday-greeting banner outside her home, 945 Twilight Ln., Wheeling. The banner was the work of her sister's husband.

Worst since '67

Record snowfall strands thousands

SNOW SHOVELERS like Leo Bryant foot-deep by morning. But Wednesday's effort put him about 6 inches ahead.

by LYNN ASINOF
The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

- O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

Studded snow tires still illegal, Page 7.

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 53. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

EVERY AVAILABLE SNOWFLOW in the Northwest suburbs was called out Wednesday to battle heavy snows that fell in record amounts and caused massive traffic jams along all major roads, in the area. Mike Weiner, Wheeling public works employee, attaches the blade to a truck in the midst of the storm, readying it for duty.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 53 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 458 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC3 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seals.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollett, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 65 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would send in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

THE SCHOOL LIBRARY will never be the same. It's now called a learning resource center and this one at Central Road School in Rolling Meadows contains not only books but videotape machines, which the children select and operate almost entirely on their own. phonographs, tape recorders, slides and film strips

Tape recorders, phonographs, film strips abound

School libraries not just books

by KATHERINE BOYCE

To some people a library means a stack of dusty books, straight-back chairs that scrape across the floor and a librarian who always frowns.

But today that's just a stereotype. You won't find many libraries like that in schools in the Northwest suburbs. They've been transformed by some of the new trends in education which have filtered through school after school over the last decade. What used to be the school library is now called the learning resource center, or, in some districts, the instructional materials center.

The resource center hardly resembles the library of a generation ago. It still contains books, but that's only part of the story. Phonographs, closed-circuit television, tape recorders, film strips and "media kits" share a place with the card catalog.

THE FAMILIAR sign proclaiming "Silence" won't be found in the resource center. It is not a place where children come in once a week to check out a book. The resource center is a hub of activity in a typical school. Students come and go every day and no one seems to mind if they whisper to each other or suddenly cry out when listening to a tape cassette.

The stern librarian sitting behind her desk is just a ghost of the past. Today a resource center director constantly works with children, answering questions, helping them find materials, teaching them to use the machines and helping them with class projects. Many of them are certified teachers and they work along with classroom teachers, scheduling assignments for the children.

"The idea is an open concept," said Joyce Hanson, learning resource center teacher at Central Road School in Rolling Meadows.

Most schools today use an individualized instruction method in the classroom, a system that is programmed to the abilities of each child. In the classroom students work alone or in groups with students of their ability and the teacher assigns lessons and projects to fit each group.

When the neat rows of desks lost their place in the classroom it became obvious to many educators that the school library no longer fit the new pattern. Today the resource center is an extension of the classroom. Students working on assignments or projects can come to the center where they use the varied materials.

THE CHILDREN at Central Road School find the materials and use the machines often without help. "We have underestimated the ability of kids to operate machines," Mrs. Hanson said. An elementary school child can learn to use a tape recorder or film strip reader as quickly — sometimes more quickly — than an adult, she said.

The resource centers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 were recently honored in national competition. This year Dist. 15 was one of eight finalists in competition sponsored by the American Library Assoc. and it was the only district in Illinois that made the finals.

THE RESOURCE center at Central Road School is set up so it can be used easily by the children. All the materials carry a color code. "I'm not totally ignoring the Dewey Decimal System," Mrs. Hanson said, but the colors make it easier for younger children to find materials. All the materials that deal with language arts are coded red, math is green, science is orange, fine arts is red and social studies is yellow.

The reading center takes up one area of the resource center. Students in kindergarten, first or second grades can walk into the reading area, pick out a book and sprawl on the carpet to page through a Dr. Seuss book or "Winnie the Pooh."

The kids love the resource centers, said Carolyn Rohrer, program director of Dist. 15 instructional resources.

They're fascinated by the materials and they like working on their own. She said a sixth grader at Central Road School once told her, "Our resource center is an arsenal of educational weapons to battle boredom . . . the best thing since lunch time."

Day-treatment plan set for emotionally disturbed

The Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center expects to begin a day-treatment program for emotionally disturbed adults in about six weeks.

Jordan Rosen, executive director of the center in Elk Grove Village, Wednesday said he has received word that the center will get a grant of about $14,000 from the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health to fund the program. About $3,000 also will be sought from each of the townships to underwrite costs, he said.

Rosen said the state grant and township monies will finance the program for the first three months. Funds to continue it after that already have been earmarked in the center's budget for next year.

THE PROGRAM is intended to provide more intensive counseling than is offered by the clinic to help adults with emotional problems avoid hospitalization.

Vocational rehabilitation and other services will be included in the program for patients leaving hospitals to aid them in making a smooth transition back into their families and communities.

The program calls for a full-time staff consisting of a director, psychiatric nurse, activity therapist and vocational therapist to work with patients a minimum of five sessions per week, five hours per session.

At least one-fourth of the treatment hours are to be scheduled in the evening to accommodate patients unable to participate during the day. A psychiatrist also will be employed on a part-time basis for consultation and medical review.

ROSEN SAID he anticipates it will take about six weeks to hire and train the staff and to obtain a facility to use for the program. Possible locations such as a local church or similar building with rooms for group therapy and vocational rehabilitation activities are being investigated.

Estimates are that about 10 per cent of the patients being treated at the center will be able to benefit from the program that will be open only to residents of Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships.

Besides mental-health-center patients, Rosen has said he expects the program's participants also could include persons referred by area hospitals, physicians or other mental health agencies.

Groundbreaking set for 6th high school

Construction of the sixth high school in High School Dist. 211 will begin Saturday with a groundbreaking ceremony at 10 a.m. at the school site on Rohlfing Road north of the Winston Park subdivision in Palatine.

Funds for the school were approved by voters in a 1970 bond referendum and a second referendum last October. Cost of the building is estimated at $16 million. Dist. 211 has received about $4.9 million for the school in state funds from the Illinois Capital Development Board.

The three-story school will be built on a 60-acre site. The school will house about 2,500 students but can be expanded to 4,000 students. The building is scheduled to open in early 1977 and will include a 500-seat auditorium and a swimming pool.

Public shows little interest

Hoffman Estates election more of 'stroll,' not race

by TONI GINETTI
A "race" isn't quite the appropriate term for it. It's more like a stroll.

That, at least, is the way the campaigning for the Hoffman Estates Village Board has been going. And with less than two weeks to go to the April 15 election, it doesn't appear that style will change.

Only four candidates are involved in the contest for three 4-year terms on the all-Republican village board. The three party-backed candidates, William Cowin, William Palmer and Jeanne Pavey, are being challenged by a sole independent running for his first elective office.

The independent, William Dooley, is running with no substantial organization behind him, and the prospects of his taking a seat against the seasoned, victory-tested Republican Party of Hoffman Estates are seen by most to be remote.

THE LACK OF more opposition against the dominant GOP has resulted in an almost noncampaign which has generated little interest among the campaigners and the public.

"It's been low keyed," GOP campaign chairman Glenn Hoffmann admitted. "It's been the kind of campaign that, from the standpoint of a campaign manager or coordinator, it hasn't been the normal campaign."

The lackluster contest is strikingly different from the municipal contest two years ago, when the Republican Party, led by Virginia Hayter for village president, swept its ticket into office against incumbent Village Pres. Fred Downey.

Even in the fall, it appeared the campaign this time would again be a lively challenge as the Schaumburg Township Democratic organization attempted to field a slate of candidates to oppose the GOP. Only a few candidates came forward, however, and committeeman John Morrissey decided against the party becoming involved in the election.

Dooley, of 104 Gentry Ct., entered the race after the Republicans held a convention in December to slate their ticket, but he vowed not to seek support from the Democrats, whom he has worked for in earlier campaigns.

"The only reason I could see (for the lack of more opposition) was there must have been some feeling that they couldn't win," Hoffmann said.

"I'D RATHER HAVE opposition. I think it's bad for the village (not to have a more contested campaign)," he said. When we have opposition and it's a hot campaign, it generates interest among the people. It's not just a question of it being a good idea for the party, but it's good for the citizens."

Dooley says he has intentionally kept his campaign at a low level.

"I have been doing it mostly by myself, mostly just drifting around. My campaign is going to be cool. Anger doesn't work. It's not a good way to go."

The independent said, however, he would have preferred more debate with his opponents. "I would have loved to go to more candidates' nights" (although he declined to attend the one debate sponsored by the Winston Knolls Homeowners Assn.)

Only three groups have sponsored candidates' nights — the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis and the Winston Knolls group. "Even as far as the civic groups are concerned, there has been less interest," Hoffmann said.

THE LIMITED interest has also made it more difficult for the party to raise funds, he said. "We don't expect to raise as much this year because there is just more apathy. It's just natural. From a campaign worker's standpoint, too, it makes it hard to get interested."

Hoffmann estimated the Republicans will spend some $850 to $1,000 on the campaign. Dooley expects to spend about $100.

If the spirit of the campaign continues to the election, a low voter turnout is a foregone conclusion, both sides say.

PLANS TO CONVERT this farmhouse in the Moon Lake Village development into a historical museum for Hoffman Estates may be sidetracked by using it for a future school site. Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, which is consid-

In Moon Lake Village development

Farmhouse to be museum or school?

A vacant farmhouse in the Moon Lake Village development of Hoffman Estates planned for a historical museum also is being sought as a school site.

The farmhouse, which a newly-formed village historical society has eyed for the museum, also is being considered by Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 for a potential second school site for the Moon Lake Village area. The district has entered into the discussions between Moon Lake and village officials on use of the site.

"We're having a bit of a hassle because the school district thinks they should have two sites there," Marilyn Lind, chairman of the Poplar Creek Historical Society, said Wednesday. She said the number of school children coming from the subdivision on Higgins Road east of Barrington Road is less than developers originally expected, but she said the district is studying whether a second site might be necessary for enrollments in five to six years.

THE HISTORICAL society in September began plans to have the site donated by the Moon Lake Village developers.

Historical relics from the Schaumburg Township area and the village would be housed in the museum.

The opening of the museum had been hoped for by 1970 to coincide with the Bicentennial celebration in the village, but Mrs. Lind said the uncertainty surrounding the matter now has also left the village's Bicentennial plans unclear.

Mrs. Lind, who also is chairing the village's Bicentennial celebration committee, said the village hopes to receive partial funding for the celebration from the state and possibly several national organization's which are also providing grants for local 1976 festivities.

However, she said plans detailing the village's Bicentennial efforts must be submitted to the state by April 15 to qualify for funding consideration. Uncertainty on the museum situation has forced her to delay preparation of a final proposal.

"What I may do is send the plans and word it in such a way that if it doesn't work out, we just won't get the funds," she said. "In the meantime, we're kind of floating."

THE HISTORICAL group has hopes of restoring the farmhouse and establishing a museum which residents will be able to tour. Mrs. Lind said funds which could be obtained from the state for the project would be matching funds, supplementing money allocated by the village or raised through contributions.

Park board losers gain strength through defeat

by STIRLING MORITA

Experience from a hard-fought campaign will make the Schaumburg Athletic Assn. stronger even though its two candidates lost in Tuesday's park election, one of the candidates predicted Wednesday.

The candidate, Ronald Hawley, 101 S. Salem Dr., said after the loss to two incumbent commissioners. "As an organization it came together Jan. 1. The first thing we tackled, it so happens, was an election. It pulled us together toward a common goal.

"We may be down now, but we're not out of it."

UNOFFICIAL VOTE totals show that Board Pres. John Brandenburg and Comr. Joseph Roberts Jr. defeated SAA-backed candidates, Hawley and Rocco Pugliese Sr., 509 Summit Dr., by more than 150 votes in a record-turnout election.

"For a bunch of amateurs, I think we did pretty well for the first time out," Hawley noted. "As an organization we have grown up. I think we made people aware that we represent a big chunk of the (village) population."

Hawley explained that even though the SAA was chartered as an organization in 1972, it was not solidly organized until January in preparation for the election. "We aren't going to take a backseat anymore."

THE SAA CANDIDATES campaigned on a platform that a volunteer organization was necessary and should be recognized and that future playing fields for the SAA had to be ensured. They also said special interest groups should be recognized by the park district.

Hawley said he did not know if he would be a candidate for future park elections, but added that any apprehensions were lifted when he was assured by commissioners that the election would not jeopardize the relationship between the two groups.

When asked if the election would affect the relationship, Roberts replied, "I don't think so. We will maintain the same level of cooperation as we have maintained in the past.

"I think we can improve our communications with the SAA."

HAWLEY SAID HE will continue as liaison as long as his involvement does not affect park district-SAA cooperation in planning for field and facility usage. "If things are amiable I will continue. If I can do the job, I will."

"One thing that came out of the campaign is that our (park district) communication with the public has been lacking," Roberts said.

He said he and Brandenburg were

Gunman steals $150 from 7-Eleven store

A masked gunman took an estimated $150 early Wednesday from the 7-Eleven Food Store, 504 W. Golf Rd., Schaumburg.

Police said the man entered the store about 5:15 a.m., pulled out a handgun and ordered the clerk to hand over the money from a cash register. The robber then put the cash into a white paper bag and fled the store on foot, authorities said.

Police did not know if the robbery was linked to one reported Tuesday night at De Witt's Children's Shoes in the Woodfield Commons Shopping Center. In that robbery, a lone gunman got away with about $124 in cash about 6:15 p.m., police reported. The descriptions of the robbers do not match, they said.

Police were told the robber in the food store incident was about 5-feet 10-inches tall and had a slim build and black curly hair. He was wearing a brown coat, green pants and tennis shoes, police said.

Record snowfall strands thousands

SNOW SHOVELERS like Leo Bryant of Arlington Heights found it difficult to keep up with the fast-falling snow, which was expected to be

by LYNN ASINOF
The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

• O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

Studded snow tires still illegal, Page 7.

• Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 33, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 51. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

• Both Woodfield and Itandhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

• Many major companies and businesses, also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

EVERY AVAILABLE SNOWPLOW in the Northwest suburbs was called out Wednesday to battle heavy snows that fell in record amounts and caused massive traffic jams along all major roads, in the area. Mike Weiner, Wheeling public works employee, attaches the blade to a truck in the midst of the storm, readying it for duty.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 58 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 458 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC8 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seats.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollett, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 85 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would send in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

PLANS TO CONVERT this farmhouse in the Moon Lake Village development into a historical museum for Hoffman Estates may be sidetracked by planning it for a future school site. Lake Village development into a historical museum Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, which is consid-

Farmhouse to be museum or school?

A vacant farmhouse in the Moon Lake Village development of Hoffman Estates planned for a historical museum also is being sought as a school site.

The farmhouse, which a newly-formed village historical society has eyed for the museum, also is being considered by Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 for a potential second school site for the Moon Lake Village area. The district has entered into the discussions between Moon Lake and village officials on use of the site.

"We're having a bit of a hassle because the school district thinks they should have two sites there," Marilyn Lind, chairman of the Poplar Creek Historical Society, said Wednesday. She said the number of school children coming from the subdivision on Higgins Road east of Barrington Road is less than developers originally expected, but she said the district is studying whether a second site might be necessary for enrollments in five to six years.

THE HISTORICAL society in September began plans to have the site donated by the Moon Lake Village developers. Historical relics from the Schaumburg Township area and the village would be housed in the museum.

The opening of the museum had been hoped for by 1976 to coincide with the Bicentennial celebration in the village, but Mrs. Lind said the uncertainty surrounding the matter now has also left the village's Bicentennial plans unclear.

Mrs. Lind, who also is chairing the village's Bicentennial celebration committee, said the village hopes to receive partial funding for the celebration from the state and possibly several national organizations which are also providing grants for local 1976 festivities.

However, she said plans detailing the village's Bicentennial efforts must be submitted to the state by April 15 to qualify for funding consideration. Uncertainty on the museum situation has forced her to delay preparation of a final proposal.

"What I may do is send the plans and word it in such a way that if it doesn't work out, we just won't get the funds," she said. "In the meantime, we're kind of floating."

THE HISTORICAL group has hopes of restoring the farmhouse and establishing a museum which residents will be able to tour. Mrs. Lind said funds which could be obtained from the state for the project would be matching funds, supplementing money allocated by the village or raised through contributions.

Authentic powwow this summer in Des Plaines

It appears likely that an authentic Indian powwow will be conducted in Des Plaines this summer as part of the city's Bicentennial celebration with final details for the event to be completed by Friday.

David Wolf, chairman of the city's Bicentennial Commission, Wednesday said he is drawing up a contract which will spell out commitments on the part of the city, Maine West High School and the Indians.

Wolf said he hopes to have the contract completed by Friday, meet with City Atty. Charles Hug to review it and have it ready in time to present to the city council for approval Monday. The contract also will be presented to the High School Dist. 207 Board of Education for action.

If the contract is approved by the city and the school board, Wolf said he hopes to arrange a public signing of the document Tuesday.

NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN school officials, members of the Bicentennial Commission and the Mascutin Indian Society, who will participate in the powwow, ended Tuesday after a 3½-hour meeting. Wolf said a tentative agreement was reached with all sides.

Officials at Maine West, where the event will be conducted if agreement is reached, expressed concern when plans for the powwow were first discussed that the ceremonial dance might damage the football turf. Officials also voiced concern over the number of persons the event would draw and whether the high school was an adequate facility for the program.

Wolf said officials asked that other cities and schools which have sponsored such events be contacted to determine what problems they had with it. Every school and city contacted responded that the event was successful and posed few if any problems, Wolf said.

"It's my feeling that we have resolved the concerns of the administration at Maine West and the superintendent's office," Wolf said. "In addition we have obtained documentation from previous powwows on the way they were handled and we have received assurances from the Mascutins on security of the camp site, hours for the performances and the type of Indian interpretive dancing to be part of the project."

THE MASCUTINS conduct an annual powwow or Indian dance competition throughout the country starting from the West coast in May and traveling to the east coast where they conclude their program by late fall.

"I think the meeting Tuesday was an excellent expression of cooperation and willingness to work together on the part of these three entities (the high school, the city and the Indians) to bring to Des Plaines a spectacle that we think will be a tremendously educational and historical documentation of Indian lore," Wolf said.

Groundbreaking set for 6th high school

Construction of the sixth high school in High School Dist. 211 will begin Saturday with a groundbreaking ceremony at 10 a.m. at the school site on Rohlfing Road north of the Winston Park subdivision in Palatine.

Funds for the school were approved by voters in a 1970 bond referendum and a second referendum last October. Cost of the building is estimated at $16 million. Dist. 211 has received about $4.9 million for the school in state funds from the Illinois Capital Development Board.

The three-story school will be built on a 60-acre site. The school will house about 2,500 students but can be expanded to 4,000 students. The building is scheduled to open in early 1977 and will include a 500-seat auditorium and a swimming pool.

Palatine will retain new business fees

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell Jones Wednesday said he does not want to meet with businessmen to discuss their complaints about the newly increased business license fees until the fees have been in effect for a while.

Jones said he wants "to know the impact that the new schedule is having on merchants before we sit down and talk about the fees."

More than 20 village businessmen have contacted the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and the Palatine Advisory Board to express their objection to the recent business-fee increase.

THE PALATINE Advisory Board, a group of residents who advise the village board on various matters and work on municipal projects, has said it is anxious to meet with village officials on behalf of the businessmen to discuss a possible revision of the new fee schedule.

Glenn Ann Jicha, chairman of the Palatine Advisory Board, said the group also wants to know why its proposal to the village board wasn't totally accepted.

The advisory board's proposal would have replaced the village's licensing system by dividing businesses into four categories and basing the fees on the square footage occupied by the firms. The board's proposed fees ranged from a minimum $35 a year for small stores to a maximum $375 a year for large industrial firms.

"We really accepted most of their proposal. We just didn't feel that their fee schedule was fair to all businesses, so we just adjusted the schedule to what the village board thought was a fair increase," Jones said.

THE VILLAGE'S new business license fees are based on the type of business and square footage. The licenses range in cost from $35 for a small service or amusement and entertainment establishment to $600 for large industries. The five categories of business license are amusement and entertainment, food, service, retail and wholesale, and industrial. There are nine steps in each category, based on the floor area of the businesses.

"If they (the Palatine Advisory Board) want to meet with us before we get most of the licenses paid off, we can do that sometime this month. But, I just don't see the sense in talking about this thing until we know what impact it has had this first time around," Jones said.

Less than half the businesses covered by the new requirements have purchased licenses.

Village officials say they need to raise $90,000 annually from business license fees to cover the cost of special services rendered to the business community. The new fee schedule, adopted earlier this year by the village board, is anticipated to bring in about $40,000.

"I REALLY don't think that there will be much change made in the new schedule. It's been effected to try and get businessmen to pay their fair share. But, we'll certainly listen to anything that anyone wants to say about the new schedule after we've given it a chance," Jones said.

Crane to get Nike land for parks?

Arlington Heights Park District officials are convinced that criticism raised this week by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., will prompt the U.S. Army to relinquish more of its land at the Nike Base to the park district.

Crane criticized recent negotiations between Army and park district officials on additional land acquisition in a letter to Howard H. Callaway, secretary of the Army.

"I am not convinced that the Army fully appreciates the concern of residents of Arlington Heights and the necessity of conducting meaningful discussions on this issue," Crane said.

"Because of the failure to make any progress, the issue is rapidly becoming, should the Army be in Arlington Heights at all?" Crane said.

CRANE SUPPORTS the park district's attempt to gain the Nike Base at Central and Wilke roads while remaining good friends with Callaway and other Army officials. Crane's office has arranged most of the meetings between Army and park district officials during the past year.

The park district has acquired 64 acres of the military base and is asking the Army to relinquish an additional 31 acres to use in the development of an 18-hole golf course. The Army is retaining 75 acres of the base to convert from a Nike facility to an Army Reserve center.

Thomas Thornton, park district director, said "Crane has made a pretty strong statement on the matter, telling the Army that they better start listening to what the residents in the area are asking for," he said.

"We have been hoping that Crane would come out and take a stronger stand against the Army on this matter. He can have influence on what will happen, more than anyone else," Thornton said.

"We are very happy with the statements because we feel that now the Army will be ready to make a compromise with us and give us a little bit more of the land that we have there," he said.

CRANE HAS requested that Army representatives explain to him "in detail" how the Army intends to use each parcel of land it still has at the base.

Edward Murnane, a spokesman for Crane, said Army officials will probably present "something more specific to Crane on the use of the base property fairly soon."

Park officials and members of the Citizens' Committee for the Utilization of the Arlington Heights Nike Base have complained that the Army has not justified its use of the land.

"I believe Crane's criticism will have a lot of effect on what the Army will do next because they have respected his involvement in this matter all along," Murnane said.

Murnane said that Crane is mostly disappointed with the "rehashing of information and arguments at these meetings, and not enough meaningful discussion and agreements being made," he said.

"He shares the frustration of the people in the village, and is starting to bear down on the Army, hoping to get a compromise soon," Murnane said.

A COMPROMISE between the Army and park district on additional land acquisition could possibly come before the end of the year. Representatives from each group will meet sometime in May to continue discussions, he said.

Crane suggested in his letter that residents may have to resort to threatening the Army with legal action because residents "have seen little progress or little indication that the Army considers the situation serious," he said.

Crane is referring to legal action that the Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott's office may take against the Army if it does not file an adequate environmental assessment statement by April 15. The Army is being required by Scott's office to file the statement to indicate what the environmental impact of the Reserve base will have on the surrounding community.

"If the impact will be too great, Scott's office could file an injunction against the Army, keeping them from developing the Reserve base as they are planning," Murnane said.

ARMY OFFICIALS announced at a March 19 meeting with representatives of Scott's office that a $1.4 million facility is being considered for the Nike base to replace the existing wooden barracks. The facility would include a mess hall, assembly hall and classrooms to accommodate the 8,400 Army Reservists who are authorized to use the base on the weekends and week nights.

Members of the citizens' committee have threatened to resume mass picketing of the Nike base this summer if Army officials do not specify their use of the base or declare surplus an additional 31 acres.

"Six months ago, the people in the community would not have threatened legal action to get the army out of Arlington Heights because they did not believe it was necessary," Crane said.

He said "the residents" deserve answers to the questions that have a very direct bearing on their property values and the well-being of their community."

The local scene

Highway safety display

A highway safety display will be presented Friday and Saturday at Rolling Meadows Shopping Center, Kirchoff Road and Meadow Drive.

The Chicago Motor Club prepared the exhibit on the school patrol-belt program, driver-safety programs and highway information services it sponsors. The club will have representatives available to answer questions at the exhibit in the shopping center mall from 4:30 to 9 p.m. Friday and noon to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Car wash Saturday

Car owners in the Rolling Meadows area can get their cars washed for $1.25, plus 25-cents for interior vacuuming, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday in the parking lot of Rolling Meadows Community Church, 2720 Kirchoff Rd.

The car wash is a fund-raiser for Explorer Post 168, sponsored by the church, to finance a trip to South Dakota to visit the Ogalala Sioux Indians. The post specialty is Indian lore and dancing. Proceeds also will help purchase materials for additional Indian costumes.

The price for washing vans is $1.50.

Jaycees fund-raiser

A four-day weekend for two in Las Vegas, including round-trip air fares, is the top prize to be given at a Las Vegas night April 12 to benefit the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

The fund-raiser is sponsored by Rolling Meadows Jaycees, and will be from 8 p.m. to midnight at Sacred Heart of Mary High School, 2800 Central Rd., Rolling Meadows. Cost of admission is $7.50 per couple.

The min-vacation will be awarded at midnight. Other gifts will be presented throughout the evening. The gifts have been donated by Rolling Meadows merchants, and range from dinners for two to sets of ovenware.

Further information can be obtained by calling 394-9353.

City can use park land under agreement

An agreement authorizing the use of some Rolling Meadows Park District property by the city is being prepared by City Atty. Donald Rose.

The city uses an area behind its public-works building, 3200 Central Rd., for dumping and storage. That land is part of South Salk Park and has been used by the city with the park's informal consent.

The park district wants the city to fence off and clean up the area. In return, it has offered a 25-year lease for $1.

The sale will be held throughout April. Sand is priced at $1.50 for 100 pounds, or $2.50 for 200 pounds, including delivery. Two brands of fertilizer will be sold. Country Cousins 12-12-12 will sell for $6.95 per 10,000 square feet, and American Green 10-6-4, which includes a weed killer, will sell for $4.95 per 5,000 square feet.

Persons wishing to buy sand may place orders by calling 394-8009 or 359-5665 or in person. Orders will be taken from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays at the Jaycee hotdog wagon, to be stationed at Dunkin' Donuts, 3303 Kirchoff Rd., Rolling Meadows. Orders should include the customer's name, address and telephone number.

Delivery of sand will be the weekend after the order is placed, and drivers will dump the sand wherever the customer wishes. Payment will be due on delivery.

Record snowfall strands thousands

by LYNN ASINOF

The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

- O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 53. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 50 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 450 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC8 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seats.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollett, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 85 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would send in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

Jones to await 'impact' of program

Village won't discuss new business fees 'for awhile'

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell Jones Wednesday said he does not want to meet with businessmen to discuss their complaints about the newly increased business license fees until the fees have been in effect for a while.

Jones said he wants "to know the impact that the new schedule is having on merchants before we sit down and talk about the fees."

More than 20 village businessmen have contacted the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and the Palatine Advisory Board to express their objection to the recent business-fee increase.

THE PALATINE Advisory Board, a group of residents who advise the village board on various matters and work on municipal projects, has said it is anxious to meet with village officials on behalf of the businessmen to discuss a possible revision of the new fee schedule.

Glenn Ann Jicha, chairman of the Palatine Advisory Board, said the group also wants to know why its proposal to the village board wasn't totally accepted.

The advisory board's proposal would have replaced the village's licensing system by dividing businesses into four categories and basing the fees on the square footage occupied by the firms. The board's proposed fees ranged from a minimum $35 a year for small stores to a maximum $375 a year for large industrial firms.

"We really accepted most of their proposal. We just didn't feel that their fee schedule was fair to all businesses, so we just adjusted the schedule to what the village board thought was a fair increase," Jones said.

THE VILLAGE'S new business license fees are based on the type of business and square footage. The licenses range in cost from $35 for a small service or amusement and entertainment establishment to $800 for large industries. The five categories of business license are amusement and entertainment, food, service, retail and wholesale, and industrial. There are nine steps in each category, based on the floor area of the businesses.

"If they (the Palatine Advisory Board) want to meet with us before we get most of the licenses paid off, we can do that sometime this month. But, I just don't see the sense in talking about this thing until we know what impact it has had this first time around," Jones said.

Less than half the businesses covered by the new requirements have purchased licenses.

Village officials say they need to raise $90,000 annually from business license fees to cover the cost of special services rendered to the business community. The new fee schedule, adopted earlier this year by the village board, is anticipated to bring in about $40,000.

"I REALLY don't think that there will be much change made in the new schedule. It's been effected to try and get businessmen to pay their fair share. But, we'll certainly listen to anything that anyone wants to say about the new schedule after we've given it a chance," Jones said.

The former business license fees, not revised since 1950, generated only $13,000 annually, and only 2 per cent of the businesses paid fees.

Village Mgr. Anton Harwig has also said that he doubts the village board will be thinking of decreasing the fees for next year.

Crane criticism to get more Nike land for parks?

Arlington Heights Park District officials are convinced that criticism raised this week by U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., will prompt the U. S. Army to relinquish more of its land at the Nike Base to the park district.

Crane criticized recent negotiations between Army and park district officials on additional land acquisition in a letter to Howard H. Callaway, secretary of the Army.

"I am not convinced that the Army fully appreciates the concern of residents of Arlington Heights and the necessity of conducting meaningful discussions on this issue," Crane said.

"Because of the failure to make any progress, the issue is rapidly becoming, should the Army be in Arlington Heights at all?" Crane said.

CRANE SUPPORTS the park district's attempt to gain the Nike Base at Central and Wilke roads while remaining good friends with Callaway and other Army officials. Crane's office has arranged most of the meetings between Army and park district officials during the past year.

The park district has acquired 64 acres of the military base and is asking the Army to relinquish an additional 31 acres to use in the development of an 18-hole golf course. The Army is retaining 75 acres of the base to convert from a Nike facility to an Army Reserve center.

Thomas Thornton, park district director, said "Crane has made a pretty strong statement on the matter, telling the Army that they better start listening to what the residents in the area are asking for," he said.

"We have been hoping that Crane would come out and take a stronger stand against the Army on this matter. He can have influence on what will happen, more than anyone else," Thornton said.

"We are very happy with the statements because we feel that now the Army will be ready to make a compromise with us and give us a little bit more of the land that we have there," he said.

CRANE HAS requested that Army representatives explain to him "in detail" how the Army intends to use each parcel of land it still has at the base.

Edward Murnane, a spokesman for Crane, said Army officials will probably present "something more specific to Crane on the use of the base property fairly soon."

Park officials and members of the Citizens' Committee for the Utilization of the Arlington Heights Nike Base have complained that the Army has not justified its use of the land.

"I believe Crane's criticism will have a lot of effect on what the army will do next because they have respected his involvement in this matter all along," Murnane said.

Murnane said that Crane is mostly disappointed with the "rehashing of information and arguments at these meetings, and not enough meaningful discussion and agreements being made," he said.

"He shares the frustration of the people in the village, and is starting to bear down on the Army, hoping to get a compromise soon," Murnane said.

A COMPROMISE between the Army and park district on additional land acquisition could possibly come before the end of the year. Representatives from each group will meet sometime in May to continue discussions, he said.

Crane suggested in his letter that residents may have to resort to threatening the Army with legal action because residents "have seen little progress or little indication that the Army considers the situation serious," he said.

Crane is referring to legal action that the Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott's office may take against the Army if it does not file an adequate environmental assessment statement by April 15. The Army is being required by Scott's office to file the statement to indicate what the environmental impact of the Reserve base will have on the surrounding community.

"If the impact will be too great, Scott's office could file an injunction against the Army, keeping them from developing the Reserve base as they are planning," Murnane said.

ARMY OFFICIALS announced at a March 19 meeting with representatives of Scott's office that a $1.4 million facility is being considered for the Nike base to replace the existing wooden barracks. The facility would include a mess hall, assembly hall and classrooms to accommodate the 8,400 Army Reservists who are authorized to use the base on the weekends and week nights.

Members of the citizens' committee have threatened to resume mass picketing of the Nike base this summer if Army officials do not specify their use of the base or declare surplus an additional 31 acres.

"Six months ago, the people in the community would not have threatened legal action to get the army out of Arlington Heights because they did not believe it was necessary," Crane said.

He said "the residents" deserve answers to the questions that have a very direct bearing on their property values and the well-being of their community."

Many special events slated for library

The Palatine Public Library will host a variety of special events during the next few weeks in observance of the Week of the Young Child, April 6-12, and National Library Week, April 13-19.

The library will have a public display of children's books at the library, 149 N. Brockway St., during the Week of the Young Child. The library also will make "Reading at Home," a brochure emphasizing the importance of developing good reading habits, available free to parents, teachers and other persons who work with children.

The library also will introduce a special collection of newly published books, by a variety of publishers, during an open house April 16 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the library. The book collection, which is being rotated between area libraries, will be at the Palatine Library April 9-24.

A production of the children's play, "Winnie the Pooh," will be presented at the library April 19 at 10:30 a.m. for National Library Week. Interested residents should obtain free tickets one hour before the performance at the library's main desk. The Old Orchard Theatre's Kids Company will present the free production.

In Moon Lake Village development

Vacant farmhouse may be museum or site for school

A vacant farmhouse in the Moon Lake Village development of Hoffman Estates planned for a historical museum also is being sought as a school site.

The farmhouse, which a newly-formed village historical society has eyed for the museum, also is being considered by Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 for a potential second school site for the Moon Lake Village area. The district has entered into the discussions between Moon Lake and village officials on use of the site.

"We're having a bit of a hassle because the school district thinks they should have two sites there," Marilyn Lind, chairman of the Poplar Creek Historical Society, said Wednesday. She said the number of school children coming from the subdivision on Higgins Road east of Barrington Road is less than developers originally expected, but she said the district is studying whether a second site might be necessary for enrollments in five to six years.

THE HISTORICAL society in September began plans to have the site donated by the Moon Lake Village developers. Historical relics from the Schaumburg Township area and the village would be housed in the museum.

The opening of the museum had been hoped for by 1976 to coincide with the Bicentennial celebration in the village, but Mrs. Lind said the uncertainty surrounding the matter now has also left the village's Bicentennial plans unclear.

Mrs. Lind, who also is chairing the village's Bicentennial celebration committee, said the village hopes to receive partial funding for the celebration from the state and possibly several national organizations which are also providing grants for local 1976 festivities.

However, she said plans detailing the village's Bicentennial efforts must be submitted to the state by April 15 to qualify for funding consideration. Uncertainty on the museum situation has forced her to delay preparation of a final proposal.

"What I may do is send the plans and word it in such a way that if it doesn't work out, we just won't get the funds," she said. "In the meantime, we're kind of floating."

THE HISTORICAL group has hopes of restoring the farmhouse and establishing a museum which residents will be able to tour. Mrs. Lind said funds which could be obtained from the state for the project would be matching funds, supplementing money allocated by the village or raised through contributions.

Miramonti spends $25 on campaign

Patricia E. Miramonti has spent only $25 on her independent campaign for a seat on the Palatine Village Board.

In a campaign fund disclosure statement issued this week, Mrs. Miramonti said she has not accepted any donations to her campaign and is funding it from her own pocket.

Expenditures listed included pictures, telephone, paper, copy charges, gas to candidates' nights, signs and coffee for workers.

"It doesn't take a lot of money, it just takes a little work," Mrs. Miramonti said. "Maybe not having money to put out a lot of literature will cut down on the number of votes I tally, but I don't believe it will make a great difference."

She expressed confidence the voters would keep informed by reading the papers, attending candidates' nights and comparing platforms.

Blood pressure tests offered at two banks

Palatine residents can get free blood pressure checkups Friday and Saturday at the Suburban National Bank, 800 E. Northwest Hwy., and the First Bank and Trust Co., 35 N. Brockway St.

The checkups are being sponsored by the Elgin Assn. of Life Underwriters to begin National Insurance Week, April 6-13.

Palatine Fire Dept. paramedics and Palatine Nurses Assn. members will assist with the checkups.

The checkups will be offered at the First Bank and Trust Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m.; and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon.

Checkups also will be offered at the Suburban National Bank Friday from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and from 5 to 7:30 p.m.; and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon.

Library to show children's films

The Palatine Public Library, 149 N. Brockway St., will show free after-school films Thursday afternoons during April. The films are shown in the children's library in the basement of the library building at 4 p.m.

"The Snowman's Dilemma" and "Springtime" will be shown today. "Santiago's Ark," the story of a boy who builds a boat on the roof of his ghetto home, will be shown April 10.

"Stars and Stripes," a film that includes John Philip Sousa's march music, will be shown April 17. "The Red Balloon," the story of a boy who makes friends with a balloon, will also be shown.

The library will present two films April 24 about African animals and the habitat.

Step up fight on dope pushers

Jaycees plan promotional 'blitz' for TIP program

The Palatine Jaycees will begin a three-month promotional blitz this month to stir up support for the Turn-In-A-Pusher program, designed to rid Palatine of drug abuse.

Posters advertising the program and number to call with information regarding drug pushers will be distributed this weekend. Telephone stickers with the TIP number, 991-2388, will be sent to homeowners in the village newsletter next week.

The days for calling with information about drug traffic have also been changed to Sunday through Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. Bruce Blank, a Jaycee, said the days were changed because it is difficult to get volunteers on Friday night, and because most drug information is gathered on the weekends, persons won't have to wait until Monday to call.

The TIP program allows anonymous callers to identify suspected drug pushers and information. The information is turned over to the Palatine Police Dept. and if it leads to an arrest the caller is eligible for a reward.

Response to the program has been very poor since it was started a year ago but the Jaycees are hopeful the promotional campaign, financed by a $475 grant from the village, will stir up interest. The programs will be reevaluated in three months to determine if it should be continued.

Hockey awards night slated

The Palatine Amateur Hockey Assn. awards night will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday at William Fremd High School, Palatine.

The awards night will conclude the hockey season for the nearly 600 boys who played on the house and traveling teams.

Record snowfall strands thousands

by LYNN ASINOF

The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

The storm set a late-season snowfall record, topping the April 16, 1961 storm that dumped 5.4 inches on the area. The National Weather Service said the spring storm is the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967 when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN on Wednesday's storm:

- O'Hare Airport was closed at 4:30 p.m. because of snow accumulation, strong winds and zero visibility. It is the third closure in the airport's history and the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

Studded snow tires still illegal. Page 7.

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Golf Road and other routes were nearly impassable. A five-mile backup was reported on the tollway east of Rte. 53. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 100 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

EVERY AVAILABLE SNOWPLOW in the Northwest suburbs was called out Wednesday to battle heavy snows that fell in record amounts and caused massive traffic jams along all major roads, in the area. Mike Weiner, Wheeling public works employee, attaches the blade to a truck in the midst of the storm, readying it for duty.

Did anyone get home?

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH RONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 58 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

SNOW SHOVELERS like Leo Bryant of Arlington Heights found it difficult to keep up with the fast-falling snow, which was expected to be foot-deep by morning. But Wednesday's effort put him about 6 inches ahead.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 458 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC-8 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seats.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollett, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 85 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would send in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

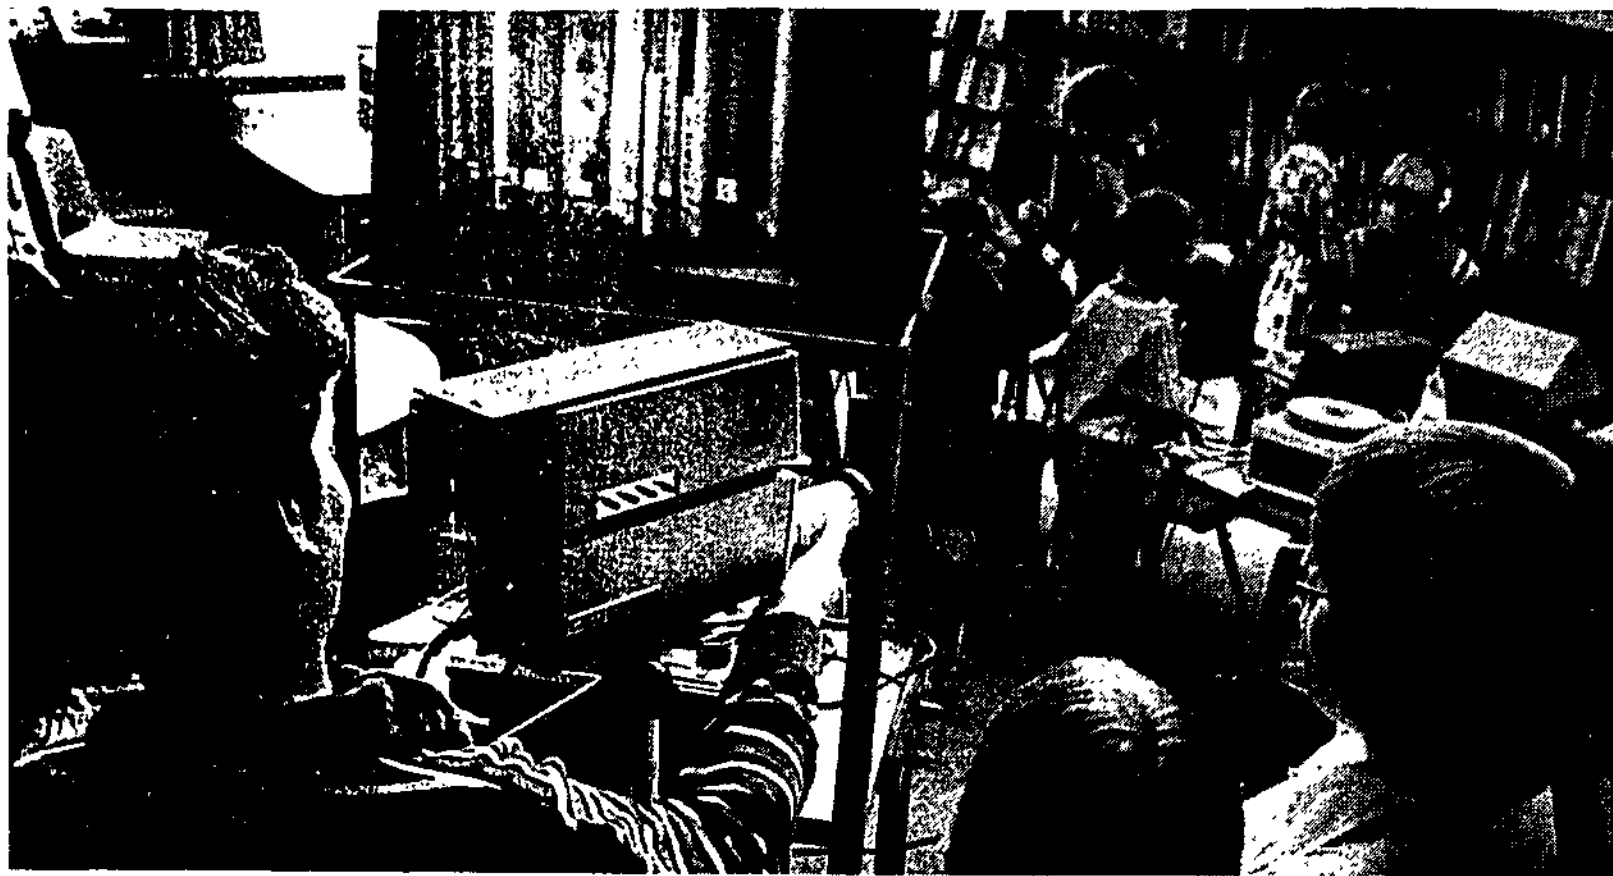

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

THE SCHOOL LIBRARY will never be the same. It's now called a learning resource center and this one at Central Road School in Rolling Meadows contains not only books but videotape machines, which the children select and operate almost entirely on their own. phonographs, tape recorders, slides and film strips

School libraries not just books

To some people a library means a stack of dusty books, straight-back chairs that scrape across the floor and a librarian who always frowns.

But today that's just a stereotype. You won't find many libraries like that in schools in the Northwest suburbs. They've been transformed by some of the new trends in education which have filtered through school after school over the last decade. What used to be the school library is now called the learning resource center, or, in some districts, the instructional materials center.

The resource center hardly resembles the library of a generation ago. It still contains books, but that's only part of the story. Phonographs, closed-circuit television, tape recorders, film strips and "media kits" share a place with the card catalog.

THE FAMILIAR sign proclaiming "Silence" won't be found in the resource center. It is not a place where children come in once a week to check out a book. The resource center is a hub of activity in a typical school. Students come and go every day and no one seems to mind if they whisper to each other or suddenly cry out when listening to a tape cassette.

The stern librarian sitting behind her desk is just a ghost of the past. Today a resource center director constantly works with children, answering questions, helping them find materials, teaching them to use the machines and helping them with class projects. Many of them are certified teachers and they work along with classroom teachers, scheduling assignments for the children.

"The idea is an open concept," said Joyce Hanson, learning resource center teacher at Central Road School in Rolling Meadows.

Most schools today use an individualized instruction method in the classroom, a system that is programmed to the abilities of each child. In the classroom students work alone or in groups with students of their ability and the teacher assigns lessons and projects to fit each group.

When the neat rows of desks lost their place in the classroom it became obvious to many educators that the school library no longer fit the new pattern. Today the resource center is an extension of the classroom. Students working on assignments or projects can come to the center where they use the varied materials.

THE CHILDREN at Central Road School find the materials and use the machines often without help. "We have underestimated the ability of kids to operate machines," Mrs. Hanson said. An elementary school child can learn to use a tape recorder or film strip reader as quickly — sometimes more quickly — than an adult, she said.

The resource centers in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 were recently honored in national competition. This year Dist. 15 was one of eight finalists in competition sponsored by the American Library Assoc. and it was the only district in Illinois that made the finals.

THE RESOURCE center at Central Road School is set up so it can be used

easily by the children. All the materials carry a color code. "I'm not totally ignoring the Dewey Decimal System," Mrs. Hanson said, but the colors make it easier for younger children to find materials. All the materials that deal with language arts are coded red, math is green, science is orange, fine arts is red and social studies is yellow.

The reading center takes up one area of the resource center. Students in kindergarten, first or second grades can walk into the reading area, pick out a book and sprawl on the carpet to page through a Dr. Seuss book or "Winnie the Pooh."

The kids love the resource centers, said Carolyn Rohrer, program director of Dist. 15 instructional resources. They're fascinated by the materials and they like working on their own. She said a sixth grader at Central Road School once told her, "Our resource center is an arsenal of educational weapons to battle boredom . . . the best thing since lunch time."

Anderson urges plan to aid village economy

by LYNN ASINOF

Mount Prospect Trustee George B. Anderson has proposed a six-point plan designed to temporarily ease economic problems in the village.

Many of the proposals, presented at Tuesday's board meeting, are included in the 1975-76 budget, also presented Tuesday night. Anderson said, however, that he wrote up his plan before seeing a copy of the budget.

To stretch existing village funds, Anderson has proposed that the village not fill job vacancies unless the job is a critical one. He said some vacancies might be filled with part-time or lower-wage senior citizens living in Mount Prospect.

BY ELIMINATING the use of consulting firms, Anderson said the village also can save some money. He said most of the projects currently handled by consultants could be temporarily handled in-house.

Anderson further proposed that all purchases of new equipment be delayed unless they are essential. He said additional money could be saved by eliminating all out-of-state conventions and conferences.

To increase village revenues, Anderson said local fines could be increased as a temporary source of more money. He said the village should also "vigorously pursue annexations to the south to take in existing industrial, retail businesses and other developed residential properties in order to broaden the tax base."

"I am convinced by the implementation of the above plan that the available monies will be stretched so that we can further appraise our services to the community and more effectively prepare for a more stable community," Anderson said.

Anderson, who is seeking reelection on the United Citizens Party ticket, said he hopes to open a dialogue on possible ways of easing the current economic problems. He said he has not asked for any board action on his proposals, but hopes the board members will consider his suggestions.

School board members, candidates

River Trails budget cuts draw mixed reaction

by LINDA PUNCH

Proposed budget cuts and staffing changes in River Trails Dist. 26 received mixed reactions Wednesday from school board members and candidates.

Business Mgr. Ralph Beaudoin told Dist. 26 board members Tuesday night that district expenditures will exceed estimated revenues by $400,000 without changes in staffing and programs. Pay raises for teachers and money for building improvements were not included in the estimated $1,596,000 budget.

Supt. John Fridlund presented staffing plans which he said could save the district up to $167,000 by reducing the staff by 15 teachers, increasing class sizes, combining some upper-grade levels and eliminating several programs. The board approved letters of termination for the district's 13 first-year teachers.

BOARD MEMBER Theodore Wattenberg said the district must make cutbacks in program and staff to avoid a deficit budget.

"I don't like red ink — it's never done any good. We've got a problem but I think we should face it," he said.

Other board members said they prefer a small deficit in the budget to making major reductions in programs.

"I don't really think a balanced budget is some sort of sacred cow. I would hate to see us sacrifice some excellent programs in the name of a balanced budget," said board member Leora Rosen.

ROSEN SAID THE board must look at the long-range trend to make sure that the deficit will "be easier to live with each year."

Board member Frank Smith said he wouldn't mind a "reasonable" deficit in the budget. "I don't believe you can live in this community without going in the red," he said.

Board member Lloyd Demel said he would be "willing to accept some nominal deficit but not a substantial amount."

"We have to believe Dr. Fridlund when he says the staffing changes won't take away from the educational programs. The only way I would vote for a budget and staffing plan is if I'm sure it won't degrade the educational progress," he said.

RICHARD FOSTER and Peggy Golden, candidates for the Dist. 26 board, said they would rather see a deficit budget if programs could be saved.

"I don't think we can provide a good education and maintain a balanced budget. I could almost go with the staffing changes if we don't eliminate some of the programs," Mrs. Golden said.

Foster said his "initial reaction is that a balanced budget is not that important.

I would rather see some small deficit this year than see some drastic changes."

Both candidates said they were upset with the dismissal of the 15 first-year teachers, although board members said some of them will be rehired before September.

"WE HOPE THAT all the teachers who want to return will find a position available. But the only way that will happen is through attrition," Demel said.

Nancy Miller, president of the River Trails Education Assn., said she was upset about the cutbacks but "it wasn't unexpected." She declined further comment until teachers can discuss the staffing changes with the administration.

Fridlund asked the board to delay action on the staffing changes until principals and staff at each school have a chance to make additional recommendations. The board will discuss the proposals at the April 15 board meeting.

Village board wrapup

$170,000 OK'd
Lonnquist Blvd.

A $170,000 improvement project for Lonnquist Boulevard west of Busse Road was approved Tuesday night by the Mount Prospect village board.

The project will be funded with motor fuel taxes.

Partial pavement exists on the street, immediately north of Clearwater Park. It will be improved with a boulevard and will provide parking spaces. The Mount Prospect Park District already has committed $12,000 towards the project because it will acquire some of the parking spaces, said Village Mgr. Robert J. Epley.

Jaycees benefit Saturday

Mayor Robert D. Teichert proclaimed Saturday as Jaycees Play Day for mentally handicapped children.

The event will begin at noon for an indoor track meet at John Hersey High School.

Anniversary resolutions

Trustees also passed two resolutions honoring the 125th anniversaries of Wheeling and Elk Grove townships.

DAMP adopted

The village board formally adopted DAMP water commission as its local agency seeking Lake Michigan water.

The agency also serves Des Plaines, Arlington Heights and Palatine.

Record snowfall strands thousands

by LYNN ASINOF
The region's worst snowstorm since 1967 stranded thousands of motorists and commuters Wednesday, and sent suburban police after uncounted numbers of accidents and ditched cars.

It was at best a giant headache for all who stepped outside.

Between 10 inches and a foot of snow were expected in the Northwest suburbs, with up to eight inches' accumulation reported in the area by Wednesday evening. The snow caused massive traffic tieups along all major roads, and public transportation was glutted with people leaving work early because of the storm.

the first since the big January 1967 snowstorm. Flights were not expected to resume until at least 6 p.m. An estimated 5,000 persons were stranded.

- Cars abandoned by motorists turned major highways into virtual parking lots. The Northwest Tollway, Ill. The cars blocked snow plows and other emergency vehicles.

- Both Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers closed several hours ahead of schedule so employees could be sent home. Some 103 employees were staying overnight at the Marshall Field and Co. store at Woodfield. Many shoppers were also stranded. "There must be a lot more stranded out in the mall," a switchboard operator said. Most of the overnight guests were sitting on couches or chairs in Field's furniture department.

- Many major companies and businesses also closed early so their employees could beat the snow.

IN SOME PLACES, stranded commuters found relief as local businesses set up makeshift comfort stations. The Jewel Food Store, 122 N. Vail St., Arlington Heights, provided a free vat of coffee for stranded commuters.

Local snow removal efforts began early Wednesday afternoon, but were hampered in many towns by the fact that the plows had been stored away because of warm weather.

EVERY AVAILABLE SNOWPLOW in the Northwest suburbs was called out Wednesday to battle heavy snows that fell in record amounts and caused massive traffic jams along all major roads, in the area. Mike Weiner, Wheeling public works employee, attaches the blade to a truck in the midst of the storm, readying it for duty.

It's curb-to-curb confusion

by RICH HONACK

You had to figure it was crazy from the start.

Every report said the roads were quagmires of cars and trucks, peppered in the snowbanks like caraway seeds in rye bread.

But at the same time there is something insanely optimistic about the average guy behind the wheel of his car heading home. And home they went, along Ill. Rte. 52 and Ill. Rte. 58 and Ill. Rte. 72 toward their homes in the suburbs — there was, after all, no other place to go.

There are a thousand stories like this, of men and women sitting in their cars, heaters going full blast, radios tuned to the dismal message from the Loop: the automobile was no longer the best way to get anywhere.

It took an average of three hours to get from the relatively cleared areas of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights to the neighborhoods of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

THE MAIN WESTERN route, Golf Road, was a wall of cars and trucks, lined up and going nowhere.

State police were at most intersections, directing traffic away from Woodfield Shopping Center which had closed early and was spilling traffic onto the already clogged roads. There were three-foot drifts blocking the entrance ramps to Rte. 53. There was no way out of the awful procession of cars. No place to stop, the only companion for each driver.

SNOW SHOVELERS like Leo Bryant of Arlington Heights found it difficult to keep up with the fast-falling snow, which was expected to be foot-deep by morning. But Wednesday's effort put him about 6 inches ahead.

'Unsafe' plane strands 400 Viet orphans

50 others flown out to Denver foster homes

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 50 orphans were flown out of war-threatened Saigon Wednesday en route to Denver and new homes in the United States. But plans to evacuate 400 others were canceled because the plane was judged unsafe.

World Airways originally planned to fly out 450 orphans sponsored by Friends of All Children, a Denver-based organization.

But organization officials called off the evacuation when they were told by U. S. officials that the DC-8 "stretch" cargo jet was dangerous because it lacked seats.

The plane had just been removed from the Saigon to Phnom Penh rice airlift. It was converted to take children by adding mattresses, blankets and safety webbing.

After Friends of All Children canceled its plans, another Denver-based group, Friends of Vietnamese Children, asked the airline to fly out the orphans under its care.

THE FLIGHT TOOK off with more than 50 children and 13 adults late Wednesday for Yokota, Japan. It then will proceed to Honolulu, Hawaii and on to Denver, where the children will be placed in foster homes.

"It's too bad they all couldn't go," said Jan Wollett, a flight attendant aboard the aircraft. "All those children had a ride out of here," she added. "Now I don't know what will happen to them."

"You know we were on that last flight from Da Nang and watched women and children stomped to death by the soldiers. I only hope that doesn't happen to those kids left behind."

World Airways president Edward B. Daly, who supervised the last evacuation flight out of Da Nang, said the aircraft carrying the orphans was safe. "This aircraft was certified by the FAA," he said. "When we put the rigging in, it's 20 to 30 per cent safer than normal seating."

"Besides, the U. S. AID man who supposedly inspected it was never on the aircraft."

IN LOS ANGELES, a spokesman for World Vision said his group was planning to airlift 85 to 100 orphans from Saigon, where they are now living in the organization's facilities. But he said plans had not been completed and he did not know what planes would be used.

In Canberra, a spokesman for department of foreign affairs said the Australian government would sent in an air force transport plane to fly out 150 orphans who had been scheduled to eventually come to Australia for adoption.

Pan American World Airways said Wednesday in New York it was negotiating with the Holt Adoption Agency of Eugene, Ore., on a chartered 747 to fly out about 400 orphans and 60 escorts.

Loser Maczka 'gained a victory'

by JOE SWICKARD
"It felt good," said Walter Maczka after Tuesday's municipal election. Maczka, a 25-year-old maverick, made a solo run for the village board. Although he failed to capture any of the four available seats, he said of his showing, "I consider it a victory."
He placed a surprisingly strong sixth in the field of eight candidates with 4,573 votes. He outpolled two Caucus candidates, who had an organization and money, even though he had just under $100 and the help of his wife and a few neighbors.

SOME OBSERVERS of the election said Maczka represented the strong anti-Caucus sentiment that wiped out all but one of the Caucus candidates, trustee-elect Madeline Schroeder.

Katherine Muller, Caucus campaign co-chairman, said Tuesday night as Maczka pulled ahead of two of her candidates, "That's all anti-Caucus. There's no other reason for it."

Maczka said it was a "combination of a lot of things" that contributed to his vote. He said he got about half his votes on the crest of the independent wave.

"I said people were ready for an independent... And the fact that I had no experience in the village government may have been a good thing. They may have been looking for a new outlook on things," he said.

OTHER OBSERVERS said he gathered a lot of votes from his top positioning on the independent side of the ballot.

No matter what the reasons, Maczka said it is "encouraging. After all I can look back a couple of weeks ago when you could count on the fingers of two hands the number of people in the village who knew my name."

Maczka watched the returns Tuesday night at the Village Independents for Progress headquarters. Although he was the only candidate at the gathering to be beaten, he was already making plans for the next village election in 1977.

"I'm not giving up. I already have some plans. I'm looking into the parking problems of the handicapped drivers... and I still don't like the streetlights they plan for Northwest Highway," he said.

THE ELECTION watch Tuesday was Maczka's first contact with many VIP backers. He said he probably could have won if he had met them earlier.

Crane criticism may get more Nike land for parks

Arlington Heights Park District officials are convinced that criticism raised this week by U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., will prompt the U. S. Army to relinquish more of its land at the Nike Base to the park district.

Crane criticized recent negotiations between Army and park district officials on additional land acquisition in a letter to Howard H. Callaway, secretary of the Army.

"I am not convinced that the Army fully appreciates the concern of residents of Arlington Heights and the necessity of conducting meaningful discussions on this issue," Crane said.

"Because of the failure to make any progress, the issue is rapidly becoming, should the Army be in Arlington Heights at all?" Crane said.

CRANE SUPPORTS the park district's attempt to gain the Nike Base at Central and Wilke roads while remaining good friends with Callaway and other Army officials. Crane's office has arranged most of the meetings between Army and park district officials during the past year.

The park district has acquired 64 acres of the military base and is asking the Army to relinquish an additional 31 acres to use in the development of an 18-hole golf course. The Army is retaining 75 acres of the base to convert from a Nike facility to an Army Reserve center.

Thomas Thornton, park district director, said "Crane has made a pretty strong statement on the matter, telling the Army that they better start listening to what the residents in the area are asking for," he said.

"We have been hoping that Crane would come out and take a stronger stand against the Army on this matter. He can have influence on what will happen, more than anyone else," Thornton said.

"We are very happy with the statements because we feel that now the Army will be ready to make a compromise with us and give us a little bit more of the land that we have there," he said.

CRANE HAS requested that Army representatives explain to him "in detail" how the Army intends to use each parcel of land it still has at the base.

Edward Murnane, a spokesman for Crane, said Army officials will probably present "something more specific to Crane on the use of the base property fairly soon."

Park officials and members of the Citizens' Committee for the Utilization of the Arlington Heights Nike Base have complained that the Army has not justified its use of the land.

"I believe Crane's criticism will have a lot of effect on what the army will do next because they have respected his involvement in this matter all along," Murnane said.

Murnane said that Crane is mostly disappointed with the "rehashing of information and arguments at these meetings, and not enough meaningful discussion and agreements being made," he said.

"He shares the frustration of the people in the village, and is starting to bear down on the Army, hoping to get a compromise soon," Murnane said.

A COMPROMISE between the Army and park district on additional land acquisition could possibly come before the end of the year. Representatives from each group will meet sometime in May to continue discussions, he said.

Crane suggested in his letter that residents may have to resort to threatening the Army with legal action because residents "have seen little progress or little indication that the Army considers the situation serious," he said.

Caucus dead as potent political force in village?

by KURT BAER

The Arlington Heights Caucus is in serious trouble. Some are saying that it is dead as a potent political force in the village.

Others believe that it will regroup in two years despite the drubbing of four of its five candidates at the polls Tuesday.

Reasons being given Wednesday for the Caucus defeat varied. All the statements taken together probably prove only that there is no right explanation, only a lot of conjecture.

"IT WAS AN anti-Caucus vote, definitely. People want a change and maybe the town is getting too big for the Caucus," said Joan Hammerstone, chairman of this year's Caucus candidate recommendation committee.

"The Caucus doesn't have the same elements it used to have, the strength of people who would work to support its candidates," she said.

"The majority of people in the village still think the Caucus is the old guard. Even the candidates are partially deceived. They go in thinking 'We've got our workers, our campaign manager and our supporters,' and they don't!"

Mrs. Hammerstone said that if there is another Caucus in two years, she does not plan on supporting it.

"PERSONALLY, I think we've seen the end of Caucus. The voters in their own way have said they want an end to it."

Russell H. Colvin, a retiring village trustee and long-time staunch Caucus supporter, took a different view of the Caucus' position.

"When you have a contested election, the one who rings the most doorbells, makes the most telephone calls and spends the most money wins the election," he said, and James T. Ryan, village president-elect, and the Village Independents for Progress, worked harder, he believes.

"There had never been a campaign in this village like Jim Ryan's. He really rang doorbells. I can't remember a campaign like his in intensity since the village manager system came in, and that was over 20 years ago," Colvin said.

RYAN SAID his door-to-door campaign extended to more than 5,000 households in the village. And he credited it as a major factor in his election victory.

The defeat of all but one Caucus candidate, Trustee-Elect Madeline Schroeder, was "no disaster at all," Colvin said, because the closely contested election raised issues and involved people in government.

"Absolutely the Caucus will continue. It's been the procedural method of getting most of the very fine people we have now in government," Colvin said. But there also is a lesson to be learned from this election, he said.

"The Caucus has gotten rather complacent. This time I think they were lulled into complacency because they had support of some individual homeowners' association leaders. But those officers weren't out ringing doorbells.

"THE CAUCUS has learned that if they want to win the election they have to work as hard as the other side," Colvin said.

George Gruke, who directed the VIP campaign, told much of his candidates' success on door-to-door campaigning. VIP workers visited some 3,000 to 4,000 homes, leaving literature and talking briefly to voters, he said.

"I have never seen such a bunch of cordial people," Gruke said. "I think there were people who felt we had a lot more to offer than the Caucus did."

Gruke admits there was "probably some reciprocity" in voting between the VIPs and Ryan, even though they were not affiliated in the campaign.

COLVIN, ON THE other hand, said flatly that he believes the VIP's "rode in on Ryan's coattails."

David Wiltse, 22-year-old political strategist who organized the so-highly-successful Ryan campaign, Wednesday said he had not fully analyzed the number of people who voted a straight Caucus ballot, or an all-independents ballot.

The fact that a single X was all it took to vote an all-Caucus slate, while five separate X's had to be marked for a straight independent ballot makes the independents' showing even more impressive, Wiltse said.

"There was a real strong, anti-Caucus, independent feeling," he said.

Rand Burdette, chairman of the 1974-75 Caucus, is the man who will have to convene the open meeting of the Caucus in October 1976, and he said there is no doubt that the Caucus will be alive.

"MY PERSONAL opinion is that the Caucus served its purpose very well this year. It produced a good slate of candidates that led to a slate of independents and the discussion of a lot of issues."

Newspaper criticism of the Caucus and the recent abandonment of the system by influential Republican leaders put the Caucus at a sharp disadvantage, Burdette said. "But it will still continue to put out a slate. If it doesn't, I don't know who will."

Election may be over, but issues remain

by KURT BAER
(A News Analysis)

The Arlington Heights village election campaign is history, and so too is the campaign the topic.

But several important issues remain and seem certain to be in the news in the weeks and months ahead.

• Utility Tax. James T. Ryan, village president-elect, said the tax can be reduced to 3 per cent this year and eliminated in 1976.

David Griffin, Ryan's unsuccessful opponent, began the call to repeal the tax. Griffin is an important member of the village board's finance committee which has been assigned the job of examining the need for the tax.

How soon that happens will depend upon Trustee Frank Palmatter, finance committee chairman. Palmatter, a 10-year veteran on the board, has termed the utility tax an accepted part of municipal finance.

• District Representation. Ryan supports a referendum proposition on whether to change from eight trustees elected at-large, to eight trustees elected by geographical district.

He has proposed that the referendum be scheduled to coincide with the next general election, November 1976.

Dwight Walton, the former village trustee who announced in January that he would back a referendum to change to district representation, said recently that he does not believe it will be necessary to force the referendum by citizen initiative.

• Downtown Redevelopment. Ryan promised to create a downtown development team that will put together a five-year plan for revitalizing the central business district.

He also pledged to form a community task force that will aggressively solicit desirable businesses and industries to locate in the village and thereby broaden the tax base.

• Board of Local Improvements. The abolition of an appointed BOLI was stressed in the Ryan campaign. He promised to place the responsibility for future special assessment proceedings on the elected village board.

• Communication. Ryan said he will appoint a residents advisory panel to meet quarterly with elected officials on village issues. He also said he will revive the Mayor's Roundtable meetings with homeowners groups. There will be at least two such meetings a month, he said.

• Plan Commission. The election results mean that Ryan will name three appointees to the 11-member plan commission. The appointments, which must be made with the advice and consent of the village board, will be necessary to replace present plan commissioners August Bettman, Madeline Schroeder and Robert Miller who were elected village trustees.

• Ethics Ordinance. Miller proposed that Arlington Heights adopt a comprehensive ethics ordinance covering all elected and appointed village officials.

Officials 'disappointed, but not surprised'

Library vote loss blamed on economy

by MARILYN McDONALD
A news analysis

Arlington Heights Memorial Library officials were disappointed but not surprised that Tuesday's referendum failed to produce funds for building expansion and a tax levy ceiling increase.

The three-part referendum just came at a bad economic time, they said.

It also attracted a number of voters from the general election who came out to cast their ballots against the Responsive Citizens' Caucus party.

And voters considered the three referendum questions separately, not as one interrelated package as library promoters hoped they would.

Voters turned down a $2.08 million bond issue to build a library addition and a lecture hall-theater by a vote of 5,848 to 4,798. They also rejected raising the legal tax limit from the present 23 cents to 40 cents per $100 assessed valuation by a vote of 6,088 to 4,584.

BUT VOTERS approved $720,000 for library book purchases by a vote of 5,704 to 4,337. Although the decision must be made by the entire board, Executive Librarian Frank Dempsey, Board Pres. Richard Frisbie, and Treasurer Roland

Ley all said the library will not spend the book funds until the library building can be expanded.

"We can't sell book bonds if we don't have space for the books," Frisbie said.

"I personally would not recommend selling the book bonds," Ley said. "Not until we have a place to put the books."

"Part of our general operating budget is always spent on books. Just to maintain what we now have, and we'll spend that money. But I wouldn't want to sell the book bonds for the purpose of maintaining our present collection," Ley said.

"IT'S UP TO the board," Dempsey said. "Before we could consider selling the book bonds, we'll have to decide where to put the books," he said.

Ley said voters approved the book bonds because "that appeared to cost the least. It appeared to have the smallest price tag," he said. Voters failed to see that money to build a place to put those books, plus the added tax dollars to operate a larger library, were all related to book purchasing, he said.

"I really can't understand. It's just exactly the opposite of our priorities. We need the taxes worse than anything. Only after that would we need the building and the books to put in it," Ley said.

Ley said the library would be financially untroubled in 1975 and "just making it through" in 1976 at the present top tax rate of 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation. But Ley said he hopes the library resubmits a tax ceiling increase to the voters in another year to avoid future staff cutbacks or wage freezes.

PAT SCUDDER, 516 Banbury Rd., a member of the Friends of the Library who promoted the referendum, believe the 500-seat lecture hall-theater may have hurt the building expansion bond issue.

"Some of the people we talked to objected to the theater. It seemed to bother them. They didn't think that we should expand into a theater," she said.

That feeling may be a holdover from the recent scrapping of plans for the village's cultural center. The village Cultural Commission tried since 1962 to raise funds and interest in a $3 million multi-use center for the village, but finally admitted defeat at the end of last year. The proposed site, 400 N. Dunton Ave., then became the site for the library's expansion.

The village board agreed to donate the village-owned site to the library when it passed its expansion referendum. Now, a new village board will have to decide if the donation is still good.

"WE HAVE SOME feeling that there is no time limit on their offer, but one board doesn't commit another board. That has to be addressed," said Ley.

Village politics were also a factor in the referendum's defeat, Ley said. "We were swept into the tide of a Caucus defeat," he said. "There was a little bit of a protest vote evident in the returns," he added. "You have to assume that people are going to be against things smacking of the old school and government, and we caught a little bit of that."

Library officials said they included the referendum in the general election to save the more than $10,000 a special elec-
